PLAN SECOND EATON ARREST

PROTEST BY PHONE WORKERS

The next step in perfecting the settlement of the differences between the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company and its 2,200 union switchboard girls in Greater Boston will be the appointment at the union's meeting Friday of three union representatives to the joint adjustment committee, which is provided for in the settlement agreement.

One of the first duties of this adjustment board, which is to be composed of three union and three company representatives, will be to take up the "bonus plan" feature of the agreement, which was rejected by the girls.

The girls voted to accept the basis of agreement only in part, one of the items turned down by the girls being the "bonus plan" proposed by the company.

The girls have accepted the adjustment committee feature of the agreement.

The adjustment board is scheduled to hold its first meeting on April 21, when the "bonus plan" and minor issues will be considered.

G. M. Bugniazet, international vice-president of the Electrical Workers' Union and strike-leader for the telephone girls, made formal report to the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration today of the settlement agreement and of the girls' vote, accepting this agreement in part.

Since a number of Taunton telephone operators were called here to act as strike-breakers, other operators of Taunton are talking of organizing a union. It is proposed to institute a southeastern Massachusetts union with locals in Taunton, Brockton, Fall River, New Bedford and nearby towns. President Robert Robertson of the Taunton Central Labor Union has the organization of the union in charge.

Vice-President Bugniazet charges that the company has already broken its promise to the Chamber of Commerce committee that it would show no discrimination to the members of the union actively identified with the settlement of the labor dispute.

He charges that the company is subjecting the operators to a closer observation than heretofore.

EXONERATE TWO IN MALDEN CASE

An all-night conference between the Malden Board of Aldermen and Mayor Charles Schumaker today resulted in a statement that no intent to defraud the city had been found in the case of Fred L. Jordon, a builder, and Frank E. Connor, building inspector. Jordon had presented a bill for $353.18 for work on the Malden High School after the fire. The matter was finally settled by allowing Jordon to submit another bill of $167 00 for work done up to April 1. The original bill included work that had not been completed.

Pope Must Give Up All Audiences, Warn Physicians

ROME, April 12 (5 p. m.).—Pope Pius X. suffered a relapse at noon today. At the Vatican it was announced that the official papal newspaper, the Osservatore Romano, would say this evening that the Pope is suffering from bronchitis.

The first official bulletin was issued on the Pope's relapse at 5:30 o'clock by Dr. Marchiafava.

The bulletin stated the Pontiff had been attacked with a fresh cold, coupled with bronchial and catarrhal symptoms. There was also a high fever. However, the doctors still insisted that the Pope's condition was not serious.

Pope Pius earlier in the day had shown continued signs of rapid recovery from his attack of influenza. His sisters said today it was likely he would be able to receive pilgrims in audience in a few days.

Despite the injunctions of his physicians and the remonstrances of his attendants, the Pope received in audience three bishops who had headed a pilgrimage, and bestowed upon them the papal blessing.

The Pontiff, wearied by his efforts, fell into a deep slumber immediately after his physicians had made their customary call.

Dr. Marchiafava had occasion this afternoon to warn the Pope. It is reported that the physician in blunt language told the Pontiff that he could not be responsible for the Pope's life unless no abandoned audiences and other church work and took absolute repose. His reluctance to eat the food prescribed for him is also worrying the doctors.

FASHION WEEK AT PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, April 12.—The screech of more than 100 steam whistles as factories and on boats along the water front at 9:30 today marked the opening of Providence United Fashion Week. Elaborate window displays had been arranged, and with the sounding of the whistles the curtains were raised in store windows and the doors thrown open to shoppers. The principal business streets were gaily decorated, and bands played concerts at the City Hall and in the business sections.

Mr. Brayton has been connected with the Brockton Postoffice since 1882. His home life was said to be ideal. He was a member of several lodges and was prominent socially in Brockton.

HOLD TWO FOR LOOT AT FIRES

The Suffolk County Grand Jury today returned indictments on fourteen counts of larceny against Henry M. Jarrett and Ralph A. Harding of the Boston Fire Patrol. The finding was reported to Judge Brown in the Superior Court.

Jarrett is president of the Fire Patrol Company, which guards business houses during the night for fires and burglars, and Harding was a solicitor for the company.

Say Agreements Were Not Kept.

It is charged that Jarrett and Harding solicited various firms, to which they promised patrol protection for a certain sum of money. The greater the amount paid to them, it is alleged, the more protection was promised.

During the investigation it is alleged that the police learned of one case where the solicitor found a card under the door when he entered his place of business in the morning and the door was unlocked, showing that the door had not even been tried.

In another place it is alleged the patrolmen were to put out the lights at night about 9:30 o'clock, but when the business man came to his store on Sunday afternoon, the lights were burning brightly.

Another subscriber charged that he was working in the store rather late one evening when he heard a rattle at the door. He went to investigate and found two cards under the door. Both had been placed there at the same time, it is alleged, but were stamped at different hours.

In the indictments, Harding is charged with soliciting the following firms and obtaining $6 from each: Frank M. Frank, Louis Kaiser, E. & R. Cleansing & Dyeing Company.

Jarrett, it is charged, did business with and received the following amounts: Beacon Falls Rubber Shoe Company, $12; M. T. Davidson Company, $6; Williams Cut Sole Company, $10; John H. Hayes, $10; Joel M. Hunter, $25.

Both Jarrett and Harding are indicted for jointly obtaining from Albert D. Mitchell, $6; Jacob R. Morse, $12; John W. Ballard, $12; Edward C. Campbell, $6; Joseph Stone, $12; Daniel J. Larkin, $6.

General Investigation Followed.

The arrest of the two men came while the investigation of robberies at the Brayman, Dow & Co. steam and gas fitters at Causeway and Medford streets, was on. As a result of these robberies a general investigation of charges of looting at fires was begun, and while this was on Jarrett and Harding were arrested. They were charged with larceny from a building on Foster's wharf, Atlantic avenue, and a larceny charge was also preferred in connection with the payment of $6 to the patrol for guarding the building.

N. Y. PATROLMAN GOES TO SING SING

NEW YORK, April 12.—The first concrete result of District Attorney Whitman's prosecution of grafters within the police department came today when former Patrolman John J. Hartigan was taken from the Tombs to Sing Sing prison to serve two and a half years, following his conviction for perjury. After Hartigan's conviction Whitman vainly sought to have him confess and implicate the "higher ups," but Hartigan refused. It has since been charged that a fund of $25,000 had been raised, which was to be placed to Hartigan's credit in the bank, provided he did not "squeal."

WASHINGTON NOW IN FLOOD PERIL

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—The Potomac River here is rising. During the flood season in Ohio which affected the headwaters of the Potomac no change was noted at Washington. MRS. SARAL DE BELLE, indicted for threatening to shoot Judge Elijah George of the Probate Court.

Mrs. Sarah DeBelle of 27 Berwick Park was indicted by the Suffolk County Grand Jury today on a charge of threatening to kill Judge Elijah George of the Suffolk County Probate Court. On March 5 Judge George rendered a decision depriving Mrs. DeBell of her ten-year-old son Frederic, after his father had obtained custody of him.

Mrs. DeBelle it is charged, entered the ante-room of the court with a loaded revolver concealed in her muff, and later she flourished the weapon and threatened to shoot Judge George. Attorney Ross, her counsel, induced her to leave the court and later she was arrested. Mrs. DeBelle was later sent to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital for examination by alienists.

NEW COUP IN POISON MYSTERY

Chief among several developments in the Eaton poison mystery today was the likelihood of a second arrest.

Another point of interest today was the statement by Francis J. Geogan of counsel for Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, the widow accused of poisoning Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, that the defence is ready to meet the State at any time.

Dr. Joseph Frame of Rockland, the Eaton family physician, says:

"There is a great deal in this case that the public does not know and that I hope it never will know."

The authorities seek D. Henry Ainsworth, Mrs. Eaton's first husband. He is wanted to clear up certain points for the police.

Important Developments Pending.

The probability of a second arrest was the most striking new turn in the case. When Mrs. Eaton was arrested at Hingham on March 20 there was talk of another arrest. This gossip was renewed when Mrs. Eaton was indicted. Then it simmered down until the public came to the conclusion that the State would stand on the arrest of the widow alone.

Now the "second arrest" talk has cropped out again, due to various indications which have been noted of late.

The authorities refuse to confirm or deny this report. District Attorney Albert F. Barker of Brockton declines to speak of that point.

Deputy Sheriff John Condon of Rockland hinted today that an important development is pending. But, when asked about a second arrest, he was silent.

Defence Is Sanguine.

Attorney Geogen of the Eaton defence said today:

"At present I feel most sanguine as to the outcome of the case. The line of defence has been prepared and it is merely verification and revision of the evidence we will present that we are at work on.

"Mrs. Eaton has assisted us materially in assembling various data in relation to her side of the case which has simplified our work to a great extent.

"At this time there is no knowing when the case will come to trial, but we are in a position to meet the government at any time. Not having died other than the four motions in relation to the indictment by the Grand Jury, you would naturally interpret this to mean that the defence does not consider the case as complicated as the public naturally expects."

Story Yet to Be Told.

Dr. Joseph Frame said:

"One of the motions filed by the attorneys for Mrs. Eaton requested a transcript of the evidence presented before the Grand Jury. With this granted my end of the case will be known, but until then I can say nothing of the Eaton case.

"I have every belief that what is right will be done in the Eaton case. There is a great deal of this case that the public does not know and I hope that they will never know."

The question whether the State will ask for a sanity commission to examine Mrs. Eaton has yet to be decided. District Attorney Barker has intimated that he would not decide, until after the Norfolk Grand Jury sitting, what he will do in this respect. Mr. Barker is District Attorney of Norfolk, as well as of Plymouth County, so is busy at Dedham now. The Norfolk Grand Jury will adjourn in about a fortnight.

D. A. R. Stirred by Big Contest to Head Society

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Preparations are being made for a hard fought battle for president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution by Mrs. William Cumming Story of New York and Mrs. John Miller Horton of Buffalo when the annual convention of that organization opens here Monday. Mrs. Story has been here for more than a week in active management of her campaign.

The question of woman suffrage may enter largely into the situation. Mrs. Story is strongly opposed to introducing suffrage into D. A. R. circles and will make her fight on that stand.

It is expected that Mrs. Story's friends will raise the subject of a circular recently issued by seven members of the National Board, high in administrative circles, attacking Mrs Story, which circular, Mrs. Story's allies allege, was paid for out of the funds of the organization. In this circular it was asserted that Mrs. Story had "spread dissension in the society and was unfit for office." Manhattan Chapter of the D. A. R. held a meeting at Mrs. Story's home in New York and denounced those whose names were attached to the circular.

MORGAN'S BODY LIES IN STATE AT CITY HOME

NEW YORK, April 12.—Covered with roses, the body of the late J. Pierpont Morgan lay today in the west wing of his great library, where in his life he brought much financial history into being. At the head and foot of the casket stand enormous candelabra, the light flickering through draped crape over the casket and the magnificent furnishings of the library.

A police detail was on duty before the Morgan home at Madison avenue and Thirty-sixth street, and the crowds of curiosity seekers which gathered before the residence were kept moving. The police guard will be maintained there until Monday. A police escort under George F. Titus, inspector of the traffic squad, will be on hand from the time the coffin is removed to St. George's Church, just before the funeral services begin Monday morning, until the body is placed on a special train which will bear it to Hartford, Ct.

Notwithstanding the announcement that all tickets to St. Georges Church have been exhausted requests still pour in. Over 6,000 requests have been received although the church seats only 1,500 persons.

The American Bankers' Association, through its president, Charles H. Huttig, has appointed the following committee to represent the organization at the funeral: George F. Baker, Frank A. Vanderlip, L. E. Pierson, A. H. Wiggin, J. S. Alexander, Benjamin Strong, Jr., and Fred E. Farnsworth.

TRANSFER SYSTEM ON THE ELEVATED EXTENDED TODAY

The operation of through cars between Needham and Forest Hills Station is discontinued today. Cars of the Bay State Street Company will run from Needham to Charles River and the Elevated Railway Company will operate its cars from that point to Forest Hills Station and return. Conductors of cars inbound from Spring street at Charles River will honor vouchers of the kind now in use from passengers boarding the car at the river, these vouchers being good as far as the junction of Spring and Centre streets.

A new transfer privilege goes into effect today at the junction of Broadway and Main street, Winter Hill. Conductors will issue checks for transfer at that point from inward-bound Broadway or Medford Hillside cars to out-bound Medford-Main street cars. These transfers are restricted to passengers boarding cars after leaving Arlington Centre and are not good for transfer to Arlington. Conductors will also issue checks for transfer from inward bound Main street Medford cars to outward bound Broadway or Medford Hillside cars. These checks will not be issued to passengers paying fare with free transfer check on West Medford cars.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 12.—Street car service of this city was resumed this morning at 5 o'clock after a six-day strike. Cars were run over all lines on the usual schedule except on Grant street, where several poles have been broken, which will require a couple of days to repair.

All cars were manned by the returned strikers, and there were cheers along the streets as the cars proceeded on their way.

The strike-breakers who had been imported by the International Railway Company were all sent out of town on special trains during the night. It is estimated that the loss to business houses, the street railway company and citizens will total more than a million dollars.

Want Church in Back Bay as the City Latin Quarter

Boston's exclusive Back Bay was termed "The Latin Quarter" by District Superintendent Rev. Dillon Bronson in his report at the New England Methodist Episcopal Conference held in People's Temple today.

Rev. Mr. Dillon said: "The Methodist of Boston should wake up and build a new church in the Fenway near the Museum of Fine Arts, which is in the heart of Boston's Latin Quarter. We have no special duty to the upper crust of society, but we are certainly doing our duty to the bottom crust."

The speaker also advocated a minimum wage of $800 for Methodist ministers, and he spoke of the need of a new $75,000 chapel for the School of Theology on Chestnut street, Boston.

A purse of gold and a bouquet of twenty-five roses were presented Rev. James Mudge of Malden, who, for twenty-five years, has served faithfully as secretary of the conference.

New England was asked by Rev. E. C. Clement to raise a fund of $200,000 toward $5,000,000 fund for superannuated Methodist clergymen.

The famous Seeley quadruplets of Dorchester, three of whom are still living, have rivals in the five children the stork has brought to Mrs. Charles Smith of Danby, a town near Ithaca, N. Y. The physician expects them to live.

The Seeley quadruplets, raised in an incubator, are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Seeley of No. 60 Sawyer avenue, Dorchester. They were born August 5, 1912. They were named Virginia, Louise, Barbara and Eleanor. A few weeks ago one of them died of pneumonia.

Records show that since 1890 ten instances of quadruplets, sixteen of quintuplets, two of sextuplets and three of septuplets have been reported. Tit Bits is authority for the statement that in Great Britain quadruplets occur eight times in every 1,000,000 births.

FIRST PATIENT OF FRIEDMANN CAN DANCE NOW

Many tubercular patients from Greater Boston have visited Dr. Friedmann, the German physician who claims to have discovered a cure for consumption, during his week in Providence, R. I. While practically all of those who have been to see him have gained an interview, and have been allowed an examination, but few have secured treatment.

Samuel Taler, twenty-five years old, of No. 16 Browning avenue, Dorchester, was the first Boston man to be inoculated with the turtle serum. Miss Milda Laskin, an eight-year-old Roxbury girl, was among the patients treated at the final clinic of the week. A number of Boston sufferers, whose names are withheld for the present, have appointments with the doctor for treatment when he returns to Providence next week.

Sophia Berger, the sixteen-year-old niece of Dr. Ille Berger of Providence, Dr. Friedmann's first patient in America, danced before Governor Pothier in the executive chamber at the Rhode Island State House to show how much she had been helped by the turtle serum of the German savant.

The treatment was given Miss Berger March 6 in New York. At that time she usually walked either with crutches or cane, owing to a tubercular affliction of three years' standing in the right knee. Her fancy steps were playfully and joyously executed before Governor Pothier and State Senator R. Livingstone Beekman of Newport, New York and Providence, one of Miss Berger's millionaire friends, who has shown a deep interest in the case.

Drops Serum Bottle.

She carried today neither crutches nor cane. Since the second injection of the serum, which was made Thursday, she says she feels more sprightly than ever. It was Governor Pothier who had much to do with making her reception by Dr. Friedmann possible, and it was the Governor who laid aside the cares of state for more than a half hour to personally congratulate the little girl, and to call many of his friends to the executive chamber that they might see what a miracle of modern medicine had been wrought.

"I may visit Boston, and then again I may not. I've hardly had time to even think about it," replied Dr. Friedmann, smilingly, when asked if he intended to come to the Bay State capital. He has received as yet no invitation from either Governor Foss or Mayor Fitzgerald, asking him to come to Boston, although scores of letters from afflicted persons have been received by him at his hotel, entreating him to do so, as the senders were without means to reach him at the Rhode Island capital.

Dr. Friedmann left for Washington to attend the banquet this evening of the Gridiron Club, at which President Wilson will be a guest. It will be the German visitor's first meeting with the President.

Ousted from Hotel.

Dr. Friedmann's patients have been conspicuous at the Narragansett Hotel. Word has been sent to him that the hostelry can no longer be used as a medical office. All his patients in the hotel were asked to leave. These included two men who had come from New York in charge of Dr. D. M. Landsman.

The last work of the week for Dr. Friedmann was done at St. Joseph's Hospital, where his third clinic of the week in Rhode Island was held, fifteen tuberculosis patients being treated. The most severe case was that of a twenty-year-old girl.

Some of the cases, as that of Max Marcus of No. 211 Fountain street, a Providence travelling salesman, who was the first treated at the concluding clinic of the week, was of but three months' standing, a slight infection of one hip. Marcus declared the Friedmann treatment painless at first, although a slight numbness at the point of injection followed in a few minutes.

WOMAN RUN DOWN, KILLED BY AUTO

PROVIDENCE, April 12.—Mrs. Annie R. Joyce, aged forty-four, of No. 409 Hope street, was run over and killed near her home by an automobile driven by Dr. Lucius C. Kingman of No. 190 Slater avenue. Mrs. Joyce was carrying an umbrella, which, it is said, prevented her seeing the automobile.

Mrs. Eills Begs Mothers of Land to Find Daughter

Mothers throughout the nation are appealed to for assistance in locating five-year-old Olga Eills of Revere and her father, John Eills, in a message Mrs. Eills has sent with police circulars forwarded by the Boston department to every city and town in the United States and Canada. Eills is under indictment by the Suffolk Grand Jury on a charge of kidnaping.

Olga was spirited away on Washington's Birthday, a few months after Mrs. Eills had obtained custody of her daughter from the courts.

The police circular describes Eills as "forty-five years old, five feet nine inches, medium complexion, smooth shaven, light brown hair, gray on temples and bald on top." It states that he was at one time a clergyman, but has lately been employed as a salesman of stocks.

The child is described as "five and one-half years, light complexion, large blue eyes, light wavy hair, and with a dimple in each cheek."

UTAH AND IDAHO JARRED BY QUAKE

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 12.—An earthquake, lasting several seconds, was experienced here at 1:30 a. m. Telephone operators on the fifth floor of the Telephone Building reported that their transmitters were rocked by the force of the shock. Train dispatchers of the Oregon Short Line Railroad reported that the shock was felt throughout Southeastern Idaho.

CRISIS TODAY IN FIGHT OVER SUGAR TARIFF

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The crisis in the Underwood tariff revision program was reached today when the Democratic caucus took up the sugar schedule. Sugar is one of the best revenue-producers in the whole tariff law. At present it brings in under the Payne law over $50,000,000 a year. The estimated revenue under the Underwood bill would be $37,000,000 a year, a 25 per cent. reduction being planned. The total revenue which the Underwood bill is expected to raise is $267,000,000 a year.

There is a strong sentiment among Democrats for putting sugar on the free list immediately, instead of at the end of three years, as planned by the Underwood bill. Representative Hardwick's amendment, putting sugar on the free list immediately, many Democrats believe, will be accepted despite President Wilson's declaration in favor of the Underwood program, and if the motion prevails the Ways and Means Committee will be compelled to devise some means of making up the $40,000,000 deficiency that will result.

Representative Broussard offered an amendment for a rate of $1.14 on sugar. Five members of the Louisiana delegation will vote against the Underwood bill on its final passage, it is said, if sugar is free listed, or if the Underwood provision is adopted by the caucus.

Modern Civilization Is Making Premature Old Age Very Common

People of Today Are Trying to Condense Ten Years of Life Into One and This Way They Are Becoming Prematurely Old, Owing to Attacks of Nervous Debility—Tona Vita Will Restore the Vigor, Vim and Vitality of Youth, Strengthening All the Nervous System.

When old age creeps on, the body naturally becomes weak, and slight cases of nervous debility are only to be expected. But the men and women of today, in the ceaseless rush and bustle of life, strive to condense ten years into one. The consequence is that hundreds of people are overcome with nervous debility before they are well out of the first flush of youth.

The brain becomes overtaxed, and loses complete control of the different organs of the body, so that every action becomes an effort.

Formerly the cure was a long rest in some sanitarium, paying strict attention to complete rest and careful diet. The average man or woman is not able to afford to take such a complete rest, and these people will be benefited by Tona Vita.

Nervous debility is remarkable for the varied symptoms which denote its presence, such as: Constant feeling of drowsiness, dull pains in the head, sense of fulness after eating, sleep that brings no real rest, loss of energy and ambition, or a constant feeling of being run-down in health.

AYERS TELLS OF REBUKING GIRL AND BOYNTON

Evidence from both sides is all in in the $25,000 alienation suit of Chester A. Boynton against Rev. William R. Ayers of the Park and Downs Church in Wollaston.

Today no session of court is held, but on Monday arguments will be made and the case given to the jury about noon.

The young minister in the closing hours of the trial went at length into the method of his life in the Boynton home and explained over again his trips to Boston with Mrs. Boynton.

"My relations with her were just as pure as a pure minded can would have them. They were those strictly of the pastor of a church to a parishioner."

That he rebuked Boynton and Flora Sass from the pulpit one day when he found them giggling in the choir was offered as additional reason why Boynton had taken sides against him in the church.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Boynton joined his church voluntarily the pastor declared.

Q.—Now, what did you do when you heard Mr. Boynton and Flora Sass giggling in the choir loft and kissing? A.—I stopped in my sermon.

Q.—Did you speak to them before the congregation? A.—I did not. I gave them a silent rebuke. For the time it was sufficient.

Q.—So they giggled again, you say? A.—Yes.

Q.—And was it then that you spoke to Flora Sass? A.—Yes, just after that, and I spoke to Mr. Boynton also.

Q.—Did you make a change out in your church in the form of communion service? A.—Yes, the form was changed from communion in the individual seats to coming to the altar.

Q.—Did Flora Sass come to the altar for communion? A.—Yes, she did.

Q.—Now, Mr. Ayers, wasn't it upon one of these occasions that Flora Sass cried and fainted when she came to communion at the altar? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, Mr. Ayers, from your experience as a Christian minister, will you or will you not say, that a young girl spoken to by her pastor on a matter that involves her relations with another man might not be overcome with emotion in approaching the altar of her church to receive communion? A.—Yes, sir. A young girl might be so overcome, but not so much as to faint and threaten to commit suicide.

Q.—Have you in your connection with the church declared an admiration for Mrs. Boynton? A.—No more so than for any woman in my parish. I look upon her as upon the rest of them.

Q.—Have you ever written any letters to Mrs. Boynton since this suit? A.—I recall none.

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A well-known New Yorker who has had wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily banished in three days without any return of the craving.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many reported. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 205-B, New York City, will send his book free on application, to anyone who writes to him.

PANKHURST HUNGER STRIKE WINS RELEASE

LONDON, April 12.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the Women's Social and Political Union and leader of the militant suffragettes, who was sentenced to three years on April 3 for inciting women to blow up the home of Chancellor David Lloyd George with bombs, was released from Holloway jail today, after serving nine days of her sentence.

Mrs. Pankhurst's release was brought about by a physical collapse brought on by a "hunger strike." Not a mouthful of solid food passed the lips of the famous militant leader during her stay in Holloway jail, although she drank water in large quantities. During the last few days of her fast Mrs. Pankhurst bore herself under the abstinence so well that the prison doctors believed that she had carried food tablets into jail secretly and was sustaining herself upon them.

Mrs. Pankhurst was very weak when she was liberated from jail and her friends fear that she will suffer serious consequences.

On Ticket-of-Leave.

Mrs. Pankhurst was sentenced by Justice Lush in Old Bailey on April 3 and immediately was taken to Holloway Jail. The parting words of the militant leader to her followers were that she would never remain in an English prison.

"I will be out in time to take part in the suffragette demonstration in Albert Hall on April 9," she declared.

Mrs. Pankhurst was liberated on a license for a limited period issued by Home Secretary Reginald McKenna. This ticket-of-leave provides that Mrs. Pankhurst shall be remanded to prison upon her return to health. The militant leader is reported in very grave condition.

Sylvia Pankhurst, a daughter of the militant leader, was notified of her mother's release and had Mrs. Pankhurst removed to a private nursing home at Bayswater.

"My mother is in very bad health," declared Sylvia Pankhurst. "She was subjected to brutal treatment in prison by physicians and warders who attempted to feed her forcibly when she refused to eat voluntarily. She is very weak and we fear that she will suffer permanently from the treatment she has undergone."

Militants Still Active.

News of the release of the leader of the "Cause" brought great joy into the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union. However it was made clear there that violence would not cease.

Lieutenants of Mrs. Pankhurst declare today that militant methods will be pursued until the government yields to the pressure and grants the franchise to women.

Phyllis Brady and Millicent Dean, two suffragettes arrested in Mitcham on April 4 for carrying implements of destruction upon their persons, were arraigned today and a sentence of six months imposed upon each. When arraigned, Phyllis Brady insisted her name was "Miss Burrell." Quantities of patent fire lighters, kerosene, gunpowder and other articles were found in the girl's pockets.

Militants got busy throughout the day at Doncastel, where they poured acid into the postoffice, destroying a large quantity of mail.

Miss Zelie Emerson's physician says he fears serious complications in her condition. Her pulse is weak, her throat alarmingly congested, the action of her heart feeble and her sleep constantly broken by nightmares, in which she screams out in fear of the warders and doctors.

Telephone Girl Is Married at Her Switchboard

EATON, Col., April 12.—Miss Alta F. Gum, operator in charge of the telephone exchange here, was married to H. B. Mick while wearing the head reciever and with the switchboard plugs in one hand. Twice during the ceremony she stopped the officiating clergyman to answer calls.

"Henry B. Mick, do you take this woman to be your lawful and wedded wife; to——" began the minister.

"Hello! Hello! Yes! Just a minute, please," broke in Miss Gum. Turning to the minister she said: "Sorry to interrupt you, but that subscriber was very anxious for a number. Proceed."

"To—to—cherish, love and protect?" stammered the embarrassed clergyman.

"And you, Alta F. Gum, do you take this man——"

"Number, please?" interrupted the operator bride. "Yes, yes, I know, but the line is busy; ring again. Oh, very well—there is your party, thank you."

After several interruptions the minister succeeded in getting the knot tied.

WOMAN BROKER OWN COUNSEL IN LOVE SUIT

Sued for $20,000 by Mrs. Seville D. Hopkins of Lynn, who alleges alienation of Charles D. Hopkins' affections, Miss Mary Gertrude Moore, Winthrop, investment broker with offices in the International Trust Building, No. 45 Milk street, is planning to act as her own counsel if the case ever comes to trial. On an appearance card filed with the paper she says: "I appear for myself."

Mrs. Hopkins, in her suit entered at the Salem court, alleges that Miss Moore contrived to deprive her of the company and aid of her husband. It is said that Mr. Hopkins has been in the employ of Miss Moore for several years.

Mrs. Hopkins filed a libel for divorce March 22, 1912. In this she stated that she was then of Swampscott and that Mr. Hopkins was of Winthrop, and that they were married at Lynn, Oct. 9, 1899.

Miss Moore is about forty years of age, good looking and somewhat fastidious about her dress, being always stylishly gowned. She is regarded as a brilliant business woman, with a thorough knowledge of financial matters.

Mrs. Hopkins was married twice before she wedded Hopkins. Both she and her husband belong to old Lynn families, prominent and well-to-do, who have always lived in the aristocratic part of the city. Mrs. Hopkins' full name is Mrs. Sevilla Davis Martin Treat Hopkins.

How I Darkened My Gray Hair

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural color with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they are all delighted with it. To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp. You can prepare it at home at very little expense.—Advertisement.

LONG WORKS FOR MITCHELL VOTE TUESDAY

RALLIES FOR MITCHELL.

TONIGHT.

In Boston—Warren Hall, Brighton.

In Framingham—Irving square, Mayor Fitzgerald, Harvey Pratt and John J. Mitchell.

NOON RALLIES TODAY.

South Framingham — Dennison's, Mr. Mitchell; R. H. Long's, Charles W. Bartlett and Mr. Mitchell; Saxonville Mills, Mr. Mitchell and T. P. Riley.

The statisticians of the Democratic State Committee say that John J. Mitchell of Marlobro will be elected to Congress in the Thirteenth District next Tuesday by a plurality not less than 3,000.

This will be a shift of 5,000 votes since last November, when John W. Weeks won by something over 2,000, his lowest plurality.

Richard H. Long, the Framingham shoe manufacturer, has given the Mitchell campaign a tremendous boost by his advocacy of the Democratic candidate.

Long and Charles S. Hamlin have easily been the star features of the Mitchell campaign. Both talk the tariff like experts.

Republican field-marshals in the district are making only the shadow of a contest. Orators supporting Norman H. White, the Progressive, have been talking about what the proposed Democratic tariff is likely to do to the shoe business. They also mention "1893" and "soup houses," and the like of that.

Long Out for Mitchell.

R. H. Long employs 700 hands in his Framingham factories. He has always been a Republican. Last Fall he contested the regular Republican nomination with Weeks. When Weeks was nominated, Mr. Long went to work in his behalf.

At Marlboro last night Mr. Long put in an appearance at a Mitchell rally. Other speakers included Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, James H. Vahey, Secretary of State Donahue and Senator McCarthy. Mr. Long said, in part:

> President Wilson has done so well, and is doing so well, that he ought to have the support of every one of us.
>
> There has been some talk here shoes on the free list.
> shoes on the Free List.
>
> I see nothing to worry about in that proposal.
>
> The present duty on shoes is only 10 per cent. and we have practically no competition from the foreign manufacturers.
>
> As a matter of fact we have to PAY 30 per cent. to get our shoes into Canada, but we sell them up there in great quantities against the shoes of Great Britain. We can hold our own in the markets of the world.
>
> Our help in the shoe shops is the most intelligent and the most skilled in the world. That helps us, of course, and another thing that helps us is that the shoe styles in America are constantly changing.

Praises His Record.

> Let the foreign shoe manufacturer try to compete with the American manufacturer and the foreigner will no sooner "get onto" the newest last in the United States than, presto, the style will have changed, and the foreigner will be "stuck."
>
> In all fairness it should be pointed out, too, that the new tariff takes the duty off from the materials that go into the making of a shoe. That helps the manufacturer.
>
> And, if Marlboro and the other shoe centres need a champion in Congress, it will be wise to send John Mitchell, who was born here among shoe workers, raised among them and has lived his life among them. Naturally he knows the wants and he understands the needs of such a district better than either of his rivals.
>
> I am for John Mitchell for Congress. I am glad to say so in his home city.

ANDERSON AND BROWN BATTLE IN COAST GO

By JACK CONWAY.

"KNOCKOUT" BROWN and "Bud" Anderson clash in a twenty-round decision bout at Vernon, California, today. This will be the second meeting between these two hard-hitting lightweights. They fought a thrilling twenty-round draw in the same ring in which they will battle today several weeks ago.

W. H. Walker, the noted Coast boxing expert who reported the last Brown-Anderson bout for the AMERICAN, declared that it was the greatest lightweight battle ever staged on California soil. Anderson clearly outpointed the blond haired Dutchman from New York in the first twelve rounds of the contest and it looked as though Morgan's protege was going to be sent to the canvas for the count of ten.

Brown, however, came back. We have always stated that Brown is a joke as a boxer, but there is no getting away from the fact that he is one of the strongest and gamest men in the ring. He refused to acknowledge defeat and when the bell sounded at the end of the twentieth session Anderson was crumpled up on the mat in a semi-conscious condition. He had been knocked down a few seconds before the end of the bout.

The referee lifted Anderson to his feet and declared the "go" a draw. He did not forget that Anderson had a big lead in the first twelve rounds and that boxing bouts are decided on points scored. The majority of referees would have awarded Brown the verdict, but Charley Eyton, who was the third man in the ring, is a king among the referees and isn't afraid to do what he knows is right and just.

The battle today is sure to be a bitter affair. It would be foolish to make either man a favorite.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, he of the mighty wallop, will show at a local theatre next week. Of course if Luther McCarty remained before the footlights any longer than he did, Smith would have declared that the big cowboy was a phony champion. "Gunboat" has often asserted that the proper place for a fighter is in the ring. But—and here's where the rub comes—that was before any theatrical manager had made Smith an offer to show his skill on the stage and get a little money under false pretenses. Professional athletes usually bat for .045 as actors.

* * *

LUTHER M'CARTY is training hard for his six-round battle with Jim Flynn which takes place in Philadelphia next Wednesday. The white heavyweight champion is an ambitious youth and causes Billy McCarney very little trouble. He is in his element when working out with his sparring partners or doing a little work on the roads. He reminds us of the way one James Jay Jeffries trained for his fight with 'Lil Artha"—we don't think.

CHAIRMAN O'NEIL of the New York State Athletic Commission and Billy Gibson, the New York boxing promoter, have forwarded a check for $2,467 to Governor Cox of Ohio. This sum is to be used for the benefit of flood sufferers. It was raised at a mammoth boxing and wrestling carnival which was recently held in New York city. The promoters gave every cent that was taken in at the gate after the necessary expenses had been deducted. All of which goes to prove that some of the noblest sporting men in the world are connected with the boxing game.

Food for Sport Fans

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

SPRING.

'Tis sweet to sing of gentle Spring
When meadow larks are on the wing
And blithe and happy robins sing
Upon the back yard fence;
When bluebells blossom in the vale
And scents are wafted on the gale
And sunshine kisses hill and dale,
And boxers beat it hence.

'Tis sweet to sing a song of May
When baseball players up and play
And common folk kick in and pay
Their dollars and thier cents.
'Tis sweet to hear the umpire's call
And see the bounding horsehide ball.
And yet—what thrills me most of all—
The boxers beat it hence.

Betting "on the nod" threatens to become the vogue on the New York turf, making it an expensive place for a man with St. Vitus' dance.

ALEXANDER.

And sprung this mournful bunch of woe on those who lingered near:
"I sigh," he said, "but not because my foemen are all through
And there is no one left to fight from Greece to Baraboo;
I sigh, but not because the world is void of war and strife
And there is no one left to fight except my faithful wife.
I am the champion of the world—the wonder of the age—
And still I cannot cop the kale upon the vaudeville stage.
I sigh to think that I was born 3,000 years too soon—
George, bring a drink and tell the band to play a ragtime tune!"

Brookline Swimmers Meet New York A.C. in Revere Meet

The Brookline Swimming Club and New York Athletic Club, long standing rivals, will clash tonight at the Ocean Pier Baths, Revere. The meeting of the two organizations promises to be the classiest of the season, and it is not unlikely that the tank records established by Hodgson of McGill University and Culman of Columbia, and the relay team record made by the local team in the B. S. C.-Columbia meet will go by the board.

The New Yorkers, with Goodwin, Nerich, South and Roberts, feel confident of showing their heels to the locals; but the Brooklineites, with James, Cooke, Nelligan, Church and Holm, swimming faster than ever, and Rich back in form, are prepared to stubbornly contest every point. The feature of the meet will be the relay race, in fact, as in the McGill meet, this event is likely to decide the winner.

The entries and events include:

50 yards—S. Roberts, G. South, N. Y. A. C.; L. G. Rich, B. James, B. S. C.

100 yards—G. South, N. Nerich, N. Y. A. C.; H. Holm, E. Church, B. S. C.

220 yards—L. B. Goodwin, N. Nerich, N. Y. A. C.; T. Nelligan, Cooke, B. S. C.

Diving—J. F. Dunn, Lee, N. Y. A. C.; E. Church, F. Jouannet, B. S. C.

Rodell Gives Smith Great Ten Round Battle in Gotham

NEW YORK, April 12—In the greatest battle between heavyweights since Joe Jeanette and Sam Langford fought here, Gunboat Smith won from George Rodell by a small margin in a ten-round bout which went the limit. Smith gained the popular decision by dropping Rodell six times to the mat, but Rodell scored the greatest number of points and was the popular hero of the big crowd. Rodell weighed 186 pounds and Smith two pounds less.

The Boer champion showed remarkable courage and great recuperative powers. Six times he took the count and many times the crowd started to leave the club house. But each time Rodell came back stronger than before he dropped and rained blows on Smith's face.

ROLLER FAILS TO THROW BURNS IN WRESTLING BOUT

Dr. Ben Roller failed to throw Cyclone Burns in their handicap wrestling match in Salem and so Burns was declared the victor.

By the terms of their agreement the doctor was to throw Burns twice within the hour. He didn't obtain any fall. It was a splendid match.

Crackajack Butler defeated Joe Willis in 29 min. 42 sec. after an intermission of an hour from their first session of 15 minutes.

Mayor Hurley and City Marshal Lehan were present. The Wiley Boys' Orchestra of six pieces played and made a big hit. There was a vaudeville entertainment.

NAP SECRETARY HAS SMALLPOX; FEAR FOR THE PLAYERS

CLEVELAND April 12.—Secretary W. R. Blackwood of the Cleveland club has been stricken with smallpox, contracted during the training season. As all the players were exposed at the same time as Blackwood, the health officials have decided to examine every player on the team and to take blood tests.

The players may have caught the disease from Blackwood, who was with them constantly. The players are nervous, and the club officials will not rest easy until the health officials pass the players.

SHAKEUP IN YALE VARSITY EIGHT

NEW HAVEN, April 12.—Head Coach W. A. Harriman of the Yale Varsity crew has made the first change in the varsity eight since the Easter season. Denman, who was No. 4 in last year's varsity, replaced Coe at No. 6 in the first boat. Plimpton took Bugbee's seat at No. 2 and Jenkinson rowed at No. 5 in place of Freeman.

BOYLE HAS SHADE.

WATERVILLE, Me., April 12.—In two six-round bouts in the Armory here Young Boyle of Lowell had the better of Billy Corrigan of Cambridge, although under the Maine law no decision was rendered by the referee.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

FORREST CADY'S misplay on Coombs and Lapp at third base in the opening game with the Athletics, which probably cost us our defeat, recalls a story that Umpire Billy Evans tells on the Red Sox and which is published for the first time. It illustrates how the "fans" are apt to size up a situation quicker than the players, and sometimes the umpires as well, all of whose minds are so concentrated on the game at close range that they frequently lose sight of the obvious.

In Cady's case the "fans" knew that Cady ought to tag Coombs, and yelled frantically for him to do so. The Sox infield seemed almost as completely paralyzed as the offending catcher. The Mack coachers and Coombs himself were for a moment almost as badly at a loss what to do as was Cady. They happened to be the first to recover their wits. Umpire Dineen was the only man on the field who had the play sized up from the start.

Everybody Was Stupified.

In the case Evans refers to, ALL the players of both teams, and BOTH UMPIRES, as well, were stupefied. But for the uproar of a crowd of "fans," score cards in hand, the incident might never have been discovered. Here is Evans' story:

"The only time a baseball team ever retired with only two men out, and none of the players and neither umpire noticed it—so far as I know—occurred in a game last season between the Red Sox and the Yankees in New York. The 'fans' were the ones who discovered the mistake.

"Jack Egan was umpiring behind the bat, and I was in the field. A Sox was on first base, one man was out, and 'Duffy' Lewis was at bat. Two balls had been pitched, both strikes. As the third ball was pitched, the man on first started to steal. The catcher made a clean catch and hurled the ball down to second, nailing the base runner. In watching the play at second, nobody on the field noticed what Egan had decided concerning the ball pitched to Lewis.

All the Sox Went Out.

"Lewis, himself, thought it was a strike, dropped his club and started for the outfield. The rest of the Sox did likewise. Egan told me afterwards that he waved to them to stop, but they did not notice him, and he, thinking that perhaps he had failed to keep accurate count of the outs, assumed that three were down and let them go. I had been watching the play at second base, thus failing to notice whether Egan had called a ball or a strike on Lewis. I assumed that it was a strike, for from where I stood it looked all right.

"The Sox were in the field and the first Yankee was going to bat when some 'fans' in the stand yelled:

"'Hey, there, what was the decision on Lewis?'

Lewis Finally Struck Out.

"Instantly a chorus from all over the stands asked the same question. The yell was so general that Stahl and Wolverton started to walk towards the plate to see what it was all about. The newspaper writers yelled down to Egan:

"'Did Lewis strike out? What was that last pitch?'

"Egan yelled back: 'Why, it was a ball.'

"'Then there are only two out,' was yelled from the stands. Egan looked at me and I nodded. He beckoned to the Sox to return to bat and ordered the Yankees out into the field again. After the change had been made, Lewis went to the plate. One ball was pitched to him and Egan shouted:

"'Three strikes—you're out. Batter up!'

"The Sox solemnly returned to the field and the Yankees came in to bat."

"What would you have done if you had been in Egan's place?" the writer asked.

"Why, under the circumstances—everybody appearing satisfied—I think I would have called that one pitched to Lewis a strike," laughed Evans. "Anyway, it was near enough. And what was the use?"

NEW YORK BETTING DISPUTE HELD UP

Worcester Academy Star Plans to Play Professional Ball

WORCESTER, April 12.—Nelson J. Sharpe, the star all-round athlete of Worcester Academy, who failed to return to school at the close of the Easter vacation, has decided to quit the amateur ranks and has signed a contract to play ball with the Springfield team of the Eastern Association.

Sharpe is the best athlete developed at Worcester for many years and won won his "W" in track, baseball and football. He played a fine game at first base on the Academy team, but intends to be a candidate for an outfield position on the Springfield team. Sharpe was a big point winner in all of the athletic events and his loss will be a serious handicap to the Academy team.

FORESTERS TO BOWL FOR STATE TITLE

Fifteen Foresters, the champions of Springfield, have challenged the champions of the Foresters' League of this city for the State title. The roll-off will take place at the Highland alleys of Roxbury this evening. Manager Frank McFarland of the alley is making arrangements for the accommodation of the rooters which are coming in a body from Springfield.

The Springfield rooters will bring a purse of $500, which they will bet on the chances of their team in the match. Manager Doherty of the local team says that he is ready to cover the money.

RED SOX FIGHT HARD TO TIE SERIES WITH THE ATHLETICS

It Seemseth Mutt Put His Ante Up Too Quickly — By "Bud" Fisher

"Cubb Must Obey Team's Laws If He Signs"—Navin

DETROIT, April 12.—Detroit baseball "fans" were today stirred by President Navin's declaration that if Ty Cobb signs with the Tigers that he will no longer be a privileged character and that he will have to obey the laws enacted by the club like the rest of the players. Navin said:

We all realize Cobb is a great ball player, and if he sees fit to stay out of the game, that is his business.

In the circumstances we will try to get along without him. It is the aim of the Detroit club to make the Tigers a Detroit institution, and not one that might be styled "all Cobb."

It is a case from now on of "one for all," and not "all for one." This is in all fairness to the other players on the team, who are working as a unit for the best interests of the Tigers.

I can show Cobb that I can pay him more money than he can earn by himself. I am willing to do that, but I am not willing to be fleeced, even at the expense of losing the greatest ball player in the world.

If Cobb returns to the team he will have to obey the club laws like the rest of the players and will not be permitted to remain from practice and do other things which he has done in the past.

MORIARTY LOSES BOUT ON A FOUL

NEW BEDFORD, April 12.—Joe Chick of Fall River won from Jimmy Moriarty of Lowell on a foul in the fifth of a scheduled twelve-round bout here. There was some question on the decision, but the majority agreed with the referee that the punch was low. Moriarty, who looked to be carrying twenty pounds of fat, was badly beaten in the last two rounds of the bout.

HOLMES IS BEATEN BY PAUL POEHLER

Paul Poehler won his second champion ship final match of the week on the Red Dragon alleys in Cambridge by taking the measure of "Ducky" Holmes. The pair rolled ten strings and neither man showed remarkable form. Poehler displayed steadier form and finished with a margin of thirty pins in his favor, the totals being 1,028 to 998.

Red Sox Fight to Tie Athletics

Bedient Picked if Game Is Played

By L. R. MURDOCH.

In spite of wet grounds at Fenway Park today, Jake Stahl and his band of world champions hoped that they would be able to get back at the Athletics today and wipe out the defeat of the opening session at Fenway Park. Hugh Bedient was picked to pitch.

The rain that prevented yesterday's game hoped Mack, because it saved him from the necessity of using one of his young pitchers against as good a man as Bedient, and rested up Eddie Plank, so that the only man feared by the Red Sox is in shape to pitch if Mack decides to call upon him.

Willie Carrell Brown and Wyckoff showed Mack some remarkable work in the Spring, they did not face such heavy hitters as the world's champions. Jack Coombs proved in Thursday's game that he is not yet ready to pitch championship baseball and Bender was worse. Plank was a genuine puzzler for the Sox, just as he always was, and since he worked for only three innings Thursday, he is ready to come back.

Looks Like Plank.

While Bedient has not shown that he is up to mid-season form, still he appeared in his Spring work to be farther advanced than most pitchers are at this time of the year. Cold weather is not as likely to bother him as it does Joe Wood.

While Stahl was naturally disappointed in Wood's showing Thursday, he did not regard it as evidence that Wood is off the form he had last season. "Smoky Joe" struck out seven men in five innings. He did not have but weather speed, but anything like it, but his control seemed almost as good as usual. There were some errors of Judgment in Wood's delivery to the Athletics which are likely to be corrected next time.

How They Beat Wood.

Mack's men are first ball hitters, as a rule, and they made four of their nine hits off Wood by banging at the first one offered. Strunk made his costly three-bagger when he was in the hole with two strikes and no balls, and it seems that that wallop must have been avoided with the exercise of the best judgment. Strunk certainly did not have to reach far for the ball he slammed to right centre. It looked from the stands as if Wood, relying altogether on his speed, had tried to sneak over three in a row on Strunk by giving him one of the kind he had previously swung at and missed, and had failed in the effort.

Wood's tremendous speed permitted him to get away with this frequently all last Summer. He fooled the Giants twice that way, but they caught him on the third attempt, when the weather was cold and windy. It is hardly to be expected that he could produce his best speed in the cold and windy weather that prevailed Thursday.

Notwithstanding Wood's defeat Thursday, "Smoky Joe" is in unusually good condition and will have everything that he had last year when he gets the right conditions.

DISTANCE STARS TO COMPETE IN 10-MILE RACE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN,
(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

Athletic followers throughout New New England will watch with interest the result of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. ten-mile road race, which will take place this afternoon. Starting from the clubhouse on Union Park street, the runners will follow Harrison avenue to Massachusetts avenue, where they will turn onto to Columbia road until Blue Hill avenue is reached.

They will have to fight a number of long hills that lie between this point and Morton street, where the half-way mark will be reached. The return will be over the same course. This race is important, as it comes a week before the American Marathon race, which is conducted by the Boston Athletic Association. The winner of the Marathon has invariably competed in this race and as a consequence the event is important in judging the calibre of the contestants for the coming Marathon.

Among the most prominent entries are those of the North Dorchester A. A. This club is trying hard to secure the first places and has entered every available athlete. Sturgis, who won the St. Mary's cross-country run in Cambridge, will start from a very low mark this afternoon. He won the time prize in last week's race and for this reason he will be allowed a very small start or put on scratch.

With him will be his club-mate, Festus Madden, who is picked by many to win this and the Marathon race. Madden is one of the strongest cross-country runners in New England and should give a good account of himself.

Starting from scratch will be Joe Silva of the Boston Athletic Association. Silva was not in good shape when he raced in the St. Mary's cross-country run. The athlete who defeats the B. A. A. veteran will have to run in great form. Silva has shown himself to be one of the best ten-milers in New England and has given many of the New York cracks hard races in three and five-mile events.

Pilgrims Get Ready for Phillies

Rain Holds Up Final With Giants

NEW YORK, April 12.—Another cold, wet, dismal day kept the ball players in their hotels this morning and chances for a game this afternoon were few and far between. This is the second day's loaf for the players, and they certainly do not like the idea one bit.

The Boston players stuck close to their hotel all the morning, but theatre parties were planned for the afternoon if the rain continued.

Manager Stallings has had several long talks with his players, and he has lauded every one for the grand victory they won the opening day. The boys have promised to work as hard in every game.

George "Lefty" Tyler was slated to work today against Manager McGraw's team. Tyler has always been a hard man for the Giants to beat, and Manager Stallings is relying on that his star New Hampshire southpaw does not get a chance to display his wares.

This was to have been the last game of the series with the Giants, and tomorrow Boss Stallings will take his band of Pilgrims over to Philadelphia for a three-day stay.

Tyler's condition is not so well known. He has not appeared in the box for Boston since March 21, when he pitched one inning against the Atlanta team.

He was obliged to retire as his arm troubled him. Tyler said today that his arm was "right" and that he expected to have no trouble in going the full nine innings in case Manager Stallings called upon him for mound duty. Otto Hess, the veteran left-hander, is Stalling's other choice.

The Boston manager announced today that Rex Devogt, the clever Spokane backstop, would probably do the catching. Devogt has made a great hit, not only with Stallings, but with the pitchers he has worked with. Buster Brown declares he is the best man he ever pitched to. All the pitchers work well with Devogt behind the mask.

The Boston players spent the rainy day yesterday taking in the vaudeville shows which are located near their hotel. Some of the young players, who have never been in New York before, went on sight-seeing trips when they learned the game was postponed, in spite of the rainy weather.

To Send Youngsters Here.

Secretary Nickerson will return to Boston tonight to remain there until the season opens on the South End grounds. All preparations have been made for the opening, but Mr. Nickerson desires to assure himself that everything will run smoothly. Ten players are also booked to be sent on to Boston. These are mostly youngsters who have a chance of breaking into the game here.

Stallings is ready to place his extra men with minor league clubs as soon as he has talked over the matter with President Gaffney. The latter, who was operated upon last week, is said to be getting well rapidly, but it is feared that he will not be able to leave the hospital where he is confined for ten days or two weeks.

Marathon Running Is Doomed; Only 38 Enter B. A. A. Race

Marathon running appears to be doomed. Only thirty-eight athletes have signified their intention of competing in the great B. A. A. classic on April 19, which is considered the leading event of its kind in this country. The Unborn Club officials say that they expect many entries the first of the week.

The distance from Ashland to the B. A. A. club house on Exeter street is twenty-five miles. The average runner considers this distance too long. And it is.

Fifteen miles is the longest any race should be. A man is usually a physical wreck after he has taken part in two or three Marathons and there are cases where young men have ruined their careers by competing in only one of these long grinds.

PLAN GYM MEET.

The Municipal A. A. has made arrangements for holding a champions-hip gymnastic meeting, open to all Boston gymnasts, at the Roxbury Turn Verein on Thursday evening, April 24.

Haverhill Loses Its Franchise in the New England League

HAVERHILL, April 12.—It was learned today that Haverhill will lose its franchise in the New England League and that the team will be transferred to Fall River. A meeting will be held of the American House in Boston this evening and final arrangements will be made.

The league has taken the franchise away from Dan Clouhecy. Clouhecy secured the franchise several years ago when he paid a sum one players for back salaries. He has been running the game in this city in connection with an association, but this Winter the parties broke and as a result the town will lose its team in the circuit.

Ted Meredith Makes New Mark for 600 Yards

TOMMY FLANNAGAN IS KNOCKED OUT

LOWELL, April 12.—Tommy Flannagan of Cambridge lasted just one round and part of the second against Phil McGovern of New York in their bout here. A hard right to the chin put him down so hard that Referee Joe Thomas could have counted a thousand before the Cambridge fighter responded.

The House on the Marsh

A CELEBRATED NOVEL BY FLORENCE WARDEN

PART II.

"ALL that you have done is perfectly right, and always will in my eyes, so you need never fear what I may say to you, child. Have you any more news? I want to hear all about Sarah's accident, and whether you were very much alarmed when you heard about the robbery at Benham Court."

"I have lots to tell you," I said hesitatingly. "But I won't tell you tonight, Mr. Rayner, because it is all bad, miserable news, and I won't spoil your first evening. It is bad enough to come back to a house as full of invalids as a hospital. But it will all come right again, now, as you are back."

Mr. Rayner laughed and seemed much pleased. He put his hand on mine, which was lying on the table, and looked into my face very kindly, indeed.

"Do you think so, my child? Are you glad to see me again"

"Yes, indeed, I am. You can't think how dull the place is when you are away. There is nobody to talk or laugh, and one creeps about the house as if one was in a Trappist monastery and didn't dare to break the sacred silence."

"Thanks, child, that is the very prettiest welcome home I have had for—for—years," said he, with much feeling in his voice.

And he kept me for a long time chatting to him and listening to his account of what he had seen in London until at last I grew very sleepy while he finished the story of his adventures, and I said I must really go to bed, or I should never be able to get up in time for breakfast. As it was, the clock struck 11 before I went upstairs.

Denham Robbery Discussed

The next morning at breakfast the talk was chiefly about the robbery at Denham Court. Mr. Rayner had read the accounts of it in the newspapers, besides the bare mention of it I had made in my letter to him, but now he wanted to hear all we had heard, and whether we were very much alarmed by it. Mrs. Rayner said very little, as usual, and I only told him Mr. Carruthers' story, reserving the suspicious things I had seen for when I should be able to talk to him alone. The opportunity soon came.

I went into the schoolroom after breakfast, thinking I would employ the hour and a half there was to spare in just beginning my letter to Laurence. But I had not gone beyond "My Own Dearest Lau—" when Mr. Rayner came in and smiled in a mischievous manner that brought the color into my cheeks when he saw what I was doing. I put away my letter at once, so I do not know how he guessed to whom I was writing.

"Am I disturbing you?" said he.

"Oh, no; I was only writing a note to pass the time."

"Well, and now for all the 'bad, miserable news' which was too overwhelming for me to hear last night."

And it required several questions and guesses on his part to draw from me the accounts of the accident to Sarah and the inevitable suspicions of how it came about. Mr. Rayner turned quite pale when I came to my slipping on the stairs and catching my foot in the string, and he looked up and out of the window from under his frowning brows with an expression of hard fury that made me instinctively move away from him. It was with averted head that I whispered all the suspicious things I had seen and heard concerning Sarah and Tom Parks with the Denham Court burglary—my view of Tom carrying something across the lawn, his returning with Sarah, the fact of two men in a cart having been seen outside—I did not say by whom, but I fancy Mr. Rayner guessed by seeing the brown portmanteau inside the back door, and lastly my discovery of the portmanteau in the cellar under the storeroom and my recognition of it and of the bracelet I took out of it at haphazard as having both come from Denham Court.

Rayner Deeply Interested

Mr. Rayner listened with deepest interest, but with some incredulity.

"My dear child, it is impossible—at least, I hope from my soul it may turn out to be. Poor old Sarah is, I acknowledge, the worst tempered and most vindictive woman alive. But the accomplice of thieves! I cannot believe it."

He got up and walked about the room, questioned me again closely, and then remained for a few minutes in deep thought.

"She would never dare! Sarah is afraid of me, and to bring stolen goods into my house would be a greater liberty than even an old servant would take, I think."

"Ah, but you were away, Mr. Rayner. She may have reckoned upon getting the things out of the house before your return," I suggested.

"And Tom Parks, too, a fellow I have a great liking for, and whom I have trusted with money, too, over and over again," he went on to himself, scarcely noticing my interruption.

I wondered Mr. Rayner did not ask me for the storeroom keys and go himself to prove at least one part of my story, but I did not like to suggest it, half fearing, coward that I was, that he would ask me to go with him to that dreadful cellar.

"Don't say a word about this to any one, child," said he at last. "I must sift the matter to the very bottom. It is possible that they both have been cheated by some clever knave into assisting him innocently. But didn't you say you saw Tom Parks carrying what you took to be the portmanteau on Tuesday night?"

"Yes, Mr. Rayner."

"But the burglary was on Wednesday. No, no, you may depend there will be some explanation of the matter as soon as Sarah is able to give an account of herself. In the meantime I will make inquiries, and will set your mind at rest as soon as possible."

He remained silent again for a little while, then shook his head, as if to dismiss all disagreeable thoughts, and said, in his usual bright tone: "And now I have a little bit of news for you, which I hope you will think neither bad nor miserable. How would you like to leave the Adlers for a short time and have a couple of weeks on the borders of the Mediterranean?"

I looked up at him in bewilderment, which amused him.

"You look at me as if you thought me a magician who could transport you against your will to the uttermost parts of the earth by a wave of my wand. This is how it is. I have to see one of Mrs. Rayner's trustees on important business at once. He is staying at Monaco, which is, as you know, not far from Nice, where I learned from Mrs. Reade the other day, she and her son are staying. But I dare say that is stale news to you, and any how it's no matter of consequence."

This was said so mischievously that I could not help growing very red indeed, and being thankful when he went on.

Unfolds His Plan

"Having to go there myself, I thought the change might do my wife good; and this morning I tried every inducement to persuade her to go, but in vain, as I expected. But for Haidee some change is absolutely necessary, as the doctor told you. And, as I cannot look entirely after the child by myself, I pondered as to who would do it for me, I decided upon you."

"Oh, but," I began, the impossibility of my travelling alone over Europe with Mr. Rayner and Haidee being clear even to my not very wise brain.

"Now listen, and hear how cleverly I have managed it. Haidee goes to look after her papa, Miss Christie goes to look after Haidee, Mrs. Christie goes to look after Miss Christie."

"My mother!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, I went to see her yesterday and proposed the plan to her, not forgetting to put in a word about your friends at Nice. She was delighted and asked your uncle's consent at once. We have already settled that she is to meet us at Liverpool street on our arrival in town next Friday morning."

Bewildered by Suddenness

"Next Friday!" said I, utterly bewildered. "And leave Mrs. Rayner all alone here?"

"Unless you can persuade her to go with us. You can wheedle a bird off a bough, and I really believe you have more influence with her than I have."

Indeed it seemed so, for I had often wondered how she could be so obstinate with him when to me she always seemed as weak as a reed.

"There, child," said Mr. Rayner, taking a letter from his pocket and putting it into my hands. "You don't seem able to take it all in. Read that."

It was a letter in my mother's handwriting. I opened it, still utterly bewildered. It said:

"My Darling Violet—Your kind friend, Mr. Rayner, is waiting so I can pen you only these few lines, and I don't know how to express my feelings at his generous offer. He says I am to write to you and persuade you to go; but I do not think you will need much persuasion. He has directed me to provide an outfit for you at his expense and bring it with me to Liverpool street station, where I am to meet you on Friday, though I don't like starting on a journey on Friday. Heaven be praised for sending us such kind friends. I have no time for more, as Mr. Rayner is waiting. With best love from your uncle and cousins, in the fond hope of seeing you very soon.

"Your affectionate mother.

"AMY CHRISTIE."

My dear mother! It was just like her to see nothing so very extraordinary in this offer, to take it as a matter of course, and thank heaven for it in the most simple-minded way, while it troubled me somewhat still. I read the letter twice through, and then tried deprecatingly to thank him for the outfit he had got her to provide.

"Oh, does she mention that I told her not to do so," said he, laughing.

"You don't know my mother. When she has anything to tell, she can't resist telling it. This letter is just like her. But she has done two things she never in all her life did before—dated her letter and put no postscript."

Cassidy Says Butter Bill Will Survive Defeat in Senate

A barefaced legislative trick—the cheapest sort of old-style chicanery—resulted in the defeat by the Massachusetts Senate yesterday of a bill introduced by Mayor Fitzgerald to correct one of the shameful frauds of the food dopers.

An attempt will be made Monday to reconsider the bill, and to pass it. Mr. Cassidy tells the story today.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A little knot of old-line G. O. P. tricksters in the Senate yesterday gave Massachusetts an exhibition of the sort of work that has thrown the Republican party into third place in the nation, and has doomed it to gradual death.

Here are some of the men concerned—in whose power it was to prevent the trick:

President Levi H. Greenwood of the Senate.
Senator Julius Garst of Worcester.
Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River.
Senator Charles V. Blanchard of Somerville
Senator David T. Montague of Boston

SENATOR McLANE is the man who introduced an amendment in an attempt to nullify the effect of the measure I had introduced to forbid telling lies on the labels of packages of goods.

Four of these Senators—the last four—voted for that amendment—but PRESIDENT GREENWOOD did not vote.

The bill killed by the Senate provided THAT NO BUTTER CONTAINING MORE THAN SIXTEEN PER CENT. OF WATER SHALL BE SOLD.

Butter, made as butter ordinarily IS made, will contain less than this per cent. It contains more only when a dishonest dealer or manufacturer DELIBERATELY WORKS EXTRA WATER INTO THE GOOD BUTTER HE HAS MADE OR BOUGHT.

Government Standard.

More than sixteen per cent. water in butter is always THE RESULT OF A DELIBERATE ATTEMPT TO CHEAT.

Furthermore:

When this bill was before the Committee on Agriculture for action, THE BUTTER DEALERS THEMSELVES TESTIFIED THAT SIXTEEN PER CENT. WAS A FAIR STANDARD AND THAT THEY DID NOT OBJECT TO IT.

And still further:

The Federal Government fixes sixteen per cent. as the standard.

THEREFORE:

This bill hit nobody except swindlers.

Now let me tell you how the bill was killed.

It had been passed by the House without debate. It had been passed by the Senate, up to the final stage, and on March 24, was sent to the Committee on Engrossment, for the examination to which all bills are subjected, to see if they are correctly worded.

SENATOR JULIUS GARST is the chairman of this committee. Bills sent to it are usually reported within three days.

This bill was held up for over two weeks, while the knot of Senators waited for an opportunity to sneak it to a vote and kill it.

The opportunity came yesterday.

Friday is an off-day in the Legislature. Many Senators go home Thursday and stay till Monday. This is especially true of Senators from the farming districts. It was these Senators who especially favored the bill, BECAUSE THE BILL WAS A PROTECTION TO THE FARMER AND BENEFITED THE FARMER MORE THAN ANYONE ELSE, by protecting him from the competition of swindlers and cheats.

The regular program of a Senate session consists of two parts. The first part consists of routine business.

This routine business is hurried over, the Clerk and the President reading off one item after another. The President calls for a voice vote on each bill presented to be enacted. There is never any debate on these bills. Not in one case in a hundred does any one vote one way or another. The President says:

"In favor say 'Aye'—opposed 'No' 'Ayes' have it."

And no member speaks a word.

The result is that till the "Order of the Day"—the real business is reached—the Senate chamber is usually half empty. Yesterday every one of those progressive and public spirited Senators who have fought for food laws—McCarthy, Clark, Ward, Horgan, Mack, and the rest—were absent.

Will Renew Fight.

PRESIDENT GREENWOOD said in his usual monotone:

"Committee on Engrossment reports Senate No. 43 is correctly drawn. Question on enactment. Those in favor say 'Aye'—opposed 'No.'" Three or four Senators shouted "No!" "The bill is defeated," said PRESIDENT GREENWOOD, and before anyone except those in the plot realized what happened, the President had taken up the next measure.

Irrespective of the merits of the bill, the method of its defeat was a trick of the most contemptible character. Senator Horgan, a friend of pure food, declared afterwards that he would move reconsideration on Monday and force a roll call to put the opponents of the bill on record.

The bill ought to pass, but whether it does or not, the old-line G. O. P. Senators have shown their colors again, and once again have attempted to trick the people out of their rights.

Aviation Cure for Man's Ills

IN spite of the risks run by aviators, the opinion is growing among doctors that flying is an excellent cure for many diseases. It is claimed that the purity of the air at high altitudes is extremely beneficial.

A noted German authority on consumption gave it as his belief not long ago that flying is an almost certain remedy for "the great white plague." His reason was that exposure to the sun's rays at a very high altitude killed the germs of consumption in the lungs.

Even before aeroplanes became as popular as they now are, there were not wanting medical men who believed in ballooning for certain ailments. As far back as 1906 Dr. George Bull, a famous oculist, advocated the balloon cure for eye troubles. People suffering from eyestrain would, according to this doctor, experience wonderful relief by going up into the air for about 8,000 feet and remaining there for some considerable time. "The purer air at such an altitude," he said, "and the effect of watching the diminutive objects on the earth below would do the eye a great deal of good."

Many professional aviators have stated that they felt in much better health after their flights. All "cobwebs" are brushed away from the brain by aviation, and headaches are often banished as if by magic.

A noted woman aviator stated a short time ago that flying was good for curing insomnia. When feeling very ill and "run down" it suddenly occurred to her that a trip in an aeroplane might effect a cure. Accordingly she made an ascent with Mr. Valentine and later on with another aviator, and to her great delight she found herself practically restored to health.

There can be no doubt that in the near future, instead of ordering patients away to the seaside, doctors will advise them to go up in the air and leave their illnesses there. On the other hand it must not be forgotten that aviation makes some people actually ill. Many of our leading flying men have suffered severely from "air-sickness" and nervous exhaustion. Almost every day, however, brings us nearer to the perfect aeroplane, and it is safe to assert that when an absolutely perfect machine has been evolved nothing but benefit to health will result from flying.

CURED CAPT. BURT'S ECZEMA FOR 50C.

Had Spent $1,000 in Vain, Then a Jar of Resinol Cured Him.

Franklin Burt of 81 Fulton st., New York, late captain in the U. S. Army, and a man whose standing makes his word absolutely beyond question, gives the following account of his cure by Resinol:

"I became afflicted with eczema twenty-five years ago. I did everything for it, but the itching and burning was so intense and continual that in 1893 I put myself in the care of a specialist. The result was of little or not any benefit.

Doctor Said "Get a Box of Resinol"

"About 1898 I called on the doctor to ask him if he yet knew of anything to cure me. He said, 'Get a box of Resinol Ointment.' I got it. The itching stopped as if by magic. By the time the jar of Resinol was all used the cure was perfected. I expended perhaps a thousand dollars and endured real suffering for many years, and at last, was relieved and cured in a month for the sum of fifty cents, the price of one jar of Resinol."

Better proof, even, than such a letter, is to try Resinol yourself and see how quickly the itching stops and stubborn skin or scalp eruptions disappear. For free trial, write to Dept. 19T, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment (50c and $1) and Resinol Soap (25c).

Julia Culp Symphony Soloist

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Julia Culp, the Dutch mezzo-soprano, was soloist at the Symphony yesterday afternoon, participating in one of Dr. Muck's classic programs.

Madame Culp has had an astounding success in Boston. Coming here unknown and unheralded in January, she has been able to return three times to increasing audiences, and finally reached the dignity of a Symphony appearance.

Let us admit right away that this success is well deserved. Her voice is almost flawless in its beauty and symmetry. Its quality is peculiarly rich and warm. It is an exceptional voice, and is managed by a fine artist.

She sang three songs composed by Schubert upon poems from Scott's "Lady of the Lake." One of these, the "Ave Maria," has been adapted to the Latin anthem and is very familiar. Few of us have ever heard it so superbly sung as by Madame Culp yesterday. The two songs from Beethoven's "Egmont" music were very delightfully given.

The orchestra program included Haydn's lovely little "Surprise" Symphony in G-major, Mozart's overture "Magic Flute," Beethoven's "Egmont" overture and Liszt's "Battle of the Huns."

This tremendous work of the imagination provoked an unusual demonstration. Franz Liszt composed a number of descriptive pieces, many of which are worthy of much more frequent performance than they get. His "Mazeppa" and "Battle of the Huns" are stupendous works, and Richard Wagner is indebted to them for some of his knowledge of the possibilities of an orchestra.

The performance of this battle piece was notable, and the orchestra deserved its ovation. The "Surprise" Symphony was as effective as ever, and people did not fail to jump at the theatrical crash in the midst of the pastoral. It did seem as if this andante were taken at too slow a pace.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

MARCH 11.—We are back here in my library, Diary and I, and I have a pleasant sense of security I have not felt in months. The house is quiet, for Manette and her little guest, after a stormy pillow fight, are asleep. I can hear Richards' droning voice relating the experiences of the Winter to her sister who has called to see her, but otherwise there is not a sound.

It is peaceful, and I am glad I am back here to stay. The Winter has been a profitable one, for Manette doesn't look like the frightened little shadow of a child she was when we took her away.

One of the joys of childhood is the shortness of its memory. I saw a bewildered look on her face when she stood on the front porch the morning after our arrival; a puzzled look that held pain in it, as if she were haunted by the memory of the woman who seized her and carried her away from that spot not so many months before.

But the look speedily vanished. She was taking Sarah Rae over to Mrs. Spencer's to see the "surprise" Auntie Jack had for her, and all terror of the past was lost in anticipation of the future.

It Was a Pup!

When she returned a few minutes later the "surprise" was at her heels, just as happy in finding an owner as she was in finding something alive to love.

It was a pup! A brown and white nondescript, so fat and short-legged it rolled rather than walked, and when Manette reached the steps it tried in vain to follow her, making brave attempts to ascend what seemed to its puppy strength an insurmountable cliff, and falling on its back and rolling over in a ball at every failure.

The laughter of the children, the frantic barks of the puppy, which seemed to think unless he could follow the children he would lose them forever, brought me to the scene. I started to the rescue, but Manette was too quick for me. Turning back, she gathered up her treasure in her arms, and, half carrying, half dragging him, she reached the top of the steps.

"I like him," Mrs. Spencer said, coming across the lawn to see what I thought of this unexpected addition to my family, "because he has no pedigree. No one will ever put a fictitious value on him because his tail and his ears measure so many inches. He is just a common little alley waif, and he has more intelligence than any of these aristocratic, highly-bred dogs that cost thousands of dollars and are owned by women who haven't any more intelligence than the dogs, nor as much. You've got a heart and a brain, haven't you, Rags?" whistling for the dog to come to her.

Went After Doll

"See," said Mrs. Spencer in triumph, "he loves Manette already. He was born to love her."

"He loves everybody," repeated Manette, and that is true. He asks nothing of life but the privilege of eating a dry crust or an occasional bone and the happiness of having someone to love. If one speaks cross to him he fixes his big brown eyes on them in a look of such reproach that it haunts me. I wouldn't scold him, Diary, if he chewed you up, and that is saying a good deal, for I do not know what I will do without you.

He has been with us less than twenty-four hours, but in that time he has chewed up Lorena Bella, Manette's best doll; he dragged Anita Jane, her next best baby, across the lawn by the hair of its head; he chewed a corner out of the best soft pillow in the nursery that he might find if there were any mice inside, and when he had scratched his way through the feathers and got his head inside, he heard no reproaches when Richards found him and pulled him out. Feathers stuck to his paws, filled his ears and clung to his nose, but his eyes were left intact and he used them so effectively that Richards only laughed.

He jumps at Manette's legs, and I don't know how many times she has had to rake off the stockings he has scratched into holes, and, altogether he has had a very busy day. When I left the nursery an hour ago he was rolled in a little ball in the bed of the doll he decapitated.

He shouldn't be allowed to sleep there all night, Diary. By all the laws of health it should be forbidden, but it takes a heart stouter than mine to remove him with Manette in tears at the prospect, Sarah Rae in equal distress, Richards in sympathy with her charge, and the pup, himself, fixing those reproachful eyes on me.

No Escape from Her

The laws of hygiene be banged, Diary; I can't refuse Manette anything she has set her heart on, and surely the love she has for the dog, and the love with which his heart is fairly bursting for her, will keep all evil away.

March 12.—When I closed your cover last night, Diary, I crossed the lawn to smoke a good night cigar at the Spencer's, and to Mrs. Jack I related all that had happened while I was gone. I made no reservation in my confession. If I wanted to, I wouldn't have dared, for Mrs. Jack would soon detect it.

She did not laugh; neither did she tell me what she had discovered about the relics of The Late Mr. Brown.

"You haven't heard the last of her, Max," she predicted when I had concluded. "She is not the kind of woman who will let her prey escape. Indeed, there are few women these days who set their hearts on capturing a man who permit anything to change them from their purpose."

She sighed, and I knew of what she was thinking. Her brother Tom had within the past month married a woman he had known only three weeks. I will not go into details. It is a marriage that suggests the story of Sappho. It was no burden the first few steps, but, oh, what a weight he will be carrying before he reaches the top of the stairs with the woman in his arms!

WHEN NERVE FAILED.

ELEVEN o'clock was the hour, and the lady was both tired and bored. He was paying his addresses to her, but she was not very sweet on him, and yet she did not know how to dispose of him kindly and gently.

Half an hour later he was still rambling on, and then he turned to that ever effervescent subject, his health.

"Yes, Miss Mollie," he said, "I know I'm not well. Seldom, indeed, do I feel myself. It's only my nerve that keeps me up at all."

She was a nice girl, but she couldn't resist the temptation. It was too much.

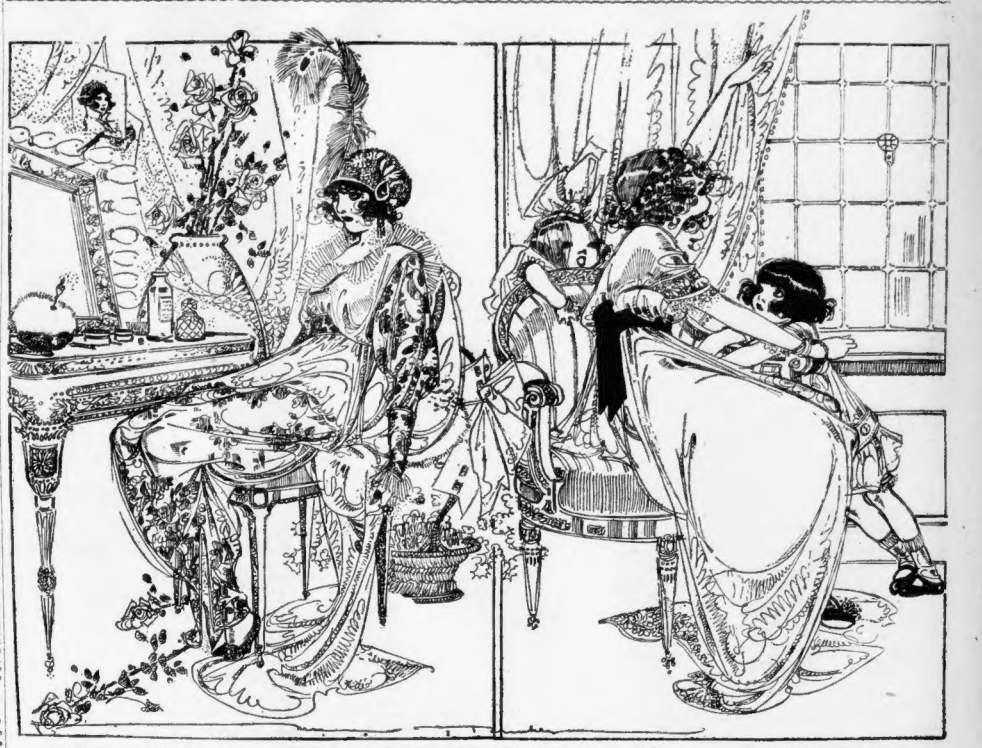

"Oh," she said sweetly, "that's funny! That's what keeps me up, too!"

Then he departed slowly, sadly, for ever and a day.

THE ACTRESS:

"Oh, for a home! What is freedom to me?
I hate the false life of the stage!
I'm tired of travel, and struggle, and pain.
My spirit loathes even the sight of a train.
There's nothing in being the rage!"

So sit we little mortals (oh, so charming in our own chosen path sometimes, if we only knew it), and, gazing on some other neighbor planet busily speeding and hurling down its orbit, we envy it and see in its sphere more silver than our own! And the other planet is a discontented little fellow, too! That's just a way some of us have with us—and it's not a NICE way. Be ambitious, but find it, if you can, awfully good to be yourself!

THE WIFE:

"Oh for the stage! It is heaven to me!
Home, Husband, and Child—what a life!
I long for the travel—the lack of restraint!
The music, the lights and the smell of grease paint.
There's nothing in being a wife!"

Mr. Man, This Is for YOU

How Are You Doing Your Duty by Your Daughter? In What Way Are You Attempting to Safeguard Her Future?

By DOROTHY DIX

MR. MAN, this article is written for YOU.

Are you a father with daughters?

Are you a brother with sisters?

If you are, how are you doing your duty by your daughter or your sister? How much real responsibility do you feel for her? What are you doing for her happiness? How are you protecting her? In what way are you attempting to safeguard her future?

Oh, of course, if you are well-to-do you give your daughter or sister her board and clothes, and I take it that if you are poor you are not the kind of a cur that takes her money away from her that she earns in store or office. But that kind of goodness is merely negative goodness. It isn't really taking care of the girl. It isn't enough. It's just the beginning of your duty to her, not the end of it.

Are you one of the grumpy fathers who growls like a sore headed bear whenever a young man comes to the house, and who looks so formidable that no youth with less courage than a wild animal tamer ever ventures back a second time?

Are You Selfish, Opposed to Youthful Joy?

Are you one of the selfish fathers who likes to go to bed at 8 o'clock, and who doesn't want to be disturbed by young people's singing and laughing, and who makes such a row every time daughter has company that she is afraid to invite her friends to her own home?

Are you a domestic tyrant whose children cower before you, whose daughter is so afraid of you that her one idea of happiness is getting as far away from you as possible?

What do you know about the young men who visit your daughter and with whom she goes to parties, and automobiling and the theatre? Are they the sort of men you would like her to marry? Are they clean and honorable, and is she safe with them? Or are they men whose very presence is a contamination, and who are as dangerous for her to associate with as it would be for a lamb to venture into a den of wolves?

Does your daughter confide in you? If she were becoming attached to a man would she give you a hint of it or not? And if you would be the last person to hear of it, why?

What are you doing to help your daughter to make the right sort of a marriage?

Brother, what do you do for your sister?

Do You Take Her Out, Or Are You Tired?

Do you take her out now and then, to places of amusement, or are you always too tired to go with sister?

Do you try to make things pleasant for her, or do you selfishly go your own way and let her shift for herself?

Do you know the men she goes with?

You belong to sister's generation; you can find out all about any young fellow who is attentive to her, and you can see that the wrong men are eliminated from her visiting list, and the right man encouraged to come to see her. Do you do this?

Do you ever have heart-to-heart talks with her and warn her against little imprudences that a girl may commit through sheer ignorance? Do you put her wise to man's point of view about a girl's conduct and dress?

Do you ever take the trouble to introduce her to nice men, the sort of men that make good husbands and that you would like to see her marry?

You see, father and brother, you have a very real duty to your daughter and sister, and there is no other duty in the world that is so often neglected. That's the principal reason that so many girls go wrong.

Girls Just as Keen For Pleasure as Men

Men have an idea that girls don't need any amusement or fun, and that all you've got to do is just tell them to remain at home, and they'll stay put. But this isn't true. Girls are just as keen for pleasure as any man is, and if they can't get it in the right way they will take it in the wrong way.

The father who won't let his daughter have her beaux at home simply turns her out on the street to meet men. If he denies her freedom at home he drives her into license abroad. If he raises a row over every letter she gets at home, he puts a premium on clandestine correspondence.

Youth must have its fling, and girlhood its laughter and dancing and romance, and it's simply a question of whether a girl has her innocent amusement in her own home, under the sympathetic yet watchful eyes of her parents, or whether she goes to places on the sly with strangers with whom she picks up acquaintance in questionable ways and indulges in amusements that only too often lead to ruin.

Any father can protect his daughter from such dangers. Any brother can save his sister from such peril. The girl whose father is her best pal and whose brother is her comrade, and who is sure of some man of her family as a willing escort to any place she desires to go is never the girl that gets into trouble. She has her knight ever at her command. Her watchdog is always on guard, and the human hyenas who prey on undefended maidens keep a respectful distance from her.

Fathers and Brothers Directly Responsible

Fathers and brothers are directly responsible for nine-tenths of the disastrous marriages that girls make. A woman has no way of finding out about the moral character of a man, but there is no man who cannot ascertain whether another man leads a dissolute life or not. It is the bounden duty of every father and every brother to keep an eagle eye on the men who visit their daughters and sisters, and to shut their doors in the faces of drunkards and libertines before the girls fall in love with these scapegraces.

Also, inasmuch as most marriages are the result of propinquity, fathers and brothers can do much toward promoting happy marriages of their daughters and sisters by inviting worthy young men to their homes, and making it pleasant for them to visit there. There is no chaperon equal to father or brother, and he can understudy heaven in the matchmaking business.

And here's a final word to father and brother. Virtue is not its only reward in this case. Girls are decidedly grateful for any attention from fathers and brothers, and if you'll only do a little of your duty to your daughter or your sister you will get such devotion and appreciation as you have never dreamed of. And it's nice to be worshipped as a little tin god.

DOCTOR RUSHES TO AID WOMAN CALLED FAKIR

Dr. Richard Wynne of Boston, who performed the operation on Miss Nellie Grant Guertin, a private detective formerly of the Back Bay, now seeking $75,000 damages for alleged injuries to her head in a taxicab accident, has hastened to New York in order to be on hand to defend Miss Guertin and himself against the charge that the operation was a "fake."

Hearing of the suit was postponed until Monday immediately upon the charges that a "faked operation" formed the basis for the suit. Judge Mack of the United States District Court in New York declared that the "case reeks of perjury." Besides Dr. Wynne he has ordered two other witnesses recalled to the stand that he may question them.

Dr. Wynne lives at No. 20 Hancock street, West End. He is a graduate of the Harvard Medical School, class of 1902, and is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Boston Medical Society.

Mrs. Wynne said today:

Miss Guertin was severely injured in New York last May when a taxicab in which she was riding was in collision with another vehicle. She was brought to Boston and, after a consultation with Dr. James A. Reilly my husband performed the operation. Miss Guertin lived near the Fenway at that time and the operation was performed at her home.

Dr. Wynne testified previously he performed an operation on Miss Guertin early in June, 1911. There was a serious puncture of the scalp, he said. In consequence, he declared, Miss Guertin was becoming insane.

Dr. James A. Reilly, who assisted at the operation, contradicted his collague. He said the operation was for removal of a wen, and that Dr. Wynne put in the knife very deep, causing a hemorrhage.

Dr. Julius Frankel of New York testified that the wound was not serious.

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock markets were dull today, and locally there was weakness. In New York, after an irregular opening, the tendency was upward and at the close leading issues averaged about a quarter of a point higher than at the end yesterday. With the exception of Canadian Pacific, the gains were small. That issue was strong in London as well as on this side of the water. There was a good tone to copper shares in the big American market, and some Boston issues of this class, including Butte and Superior, sold higher.

But locally there was weakness in the industrial list. United Fruit ended 3¼ lower because of talk of government prosecution. Boston Elevated was down 4¾. It touched a new low price because of fear that its dividend rate may be reduced.

The New York bank average statement reads: Excess cash reserve, $12,856,100; increase $1,068,500; loans, decrease $2,627,000; specie, increase $8,000; legal tenders, increase $47,000; net deposits, decrease $7,796,000; circulation, increase $47,000. Actual statement: Loans, decrease $1,216,000; specie, increase $2,601,099; legal tenders, increase $2,404,000; net deposits, increase $2,143,000; reserve, increase $4,581,650.

Trading Dull in New York.

When the New York market opened trading was small in volume and prices were irregular. Transactions had a very professional appearance in almost every instance. Union Pacific was one of the most active issues, yielding ⅛ to 152¾, while Lehigh Valley rose ½ to 159⅝. The same irregularity prevailed among industrials. Pronounced strength was shown by Canadian Pacific, which opened 1½ higher. Part of this gain was lost later. Among the other declines were U. S. Rubber common, ⅝; Readin, ⅛; General Electric, ¼; Atchison, ⅛, and Amalgamated ¼. The advances included Steel common, ¼; Lehigh Valley, ½, and American Smelting, ¼.

The Curb was irregular.

Americans Rallied in London.

In the London market American stocks rallied on covering and left off at top figures. Canadian Pacific was firm there. The big British market had a good tone and sentiment was more bullish.

The firmness of consols was partly due to a renewal of discussion as to the probability of the Bank of England soon reducing its minimum rate of discount.

United States vs. United Fruit.

It is said the United States government is thinking of prosecuting the United Fruit Company under the Sherman act. Assistant United States Attorney-General William S. Grieg and two special treasury agents have been in New York presenting evidence to the Federal Grand Jury on which to base indictments.

"The government," it is said, "is proceeding on the hypothesis that the company has acquired 85 per cent. of the business of importing fruit from Jamaica, Cuba and Central and South American countries, through unfair competition and stifling methods that are in conflict with the criminal provisions of the anti-trust law.

"Last Summer," it is said, "the Atlantic Fruit Company, the young rival of United Fruit, appealed to Washington, saying it feared it would be driven out of business, and asking for a chance to compete in the banana field.

"If the government is successful in prosecuting United Fruit on criminal charges a dissolution suit will be unnecessary. If the criminal case fails the government can still bring civil action.

"Under the criminal provisions of the Sherman law, officers of a corporation that is shown to have violated the law are liable to imprisonment for one year or $5,000 fine or both."

Importers Against Tariff Bill.

Framing a tariff measure that will suit anybody is difficult. Now importers are against the Underwood measure. A memorial protesting against certain provisions of the measure now before Congress has been formulated on behalf of New York importers. The protest says:

"The administrative features of the proposed tariff bill are unfair, unworkable, arbitrary and tyrannical. They constitute a victory for the highly protected American manufacturers in their efforts to hamper, harass and injure importers."

Financial News in Brief.

Gay & Sturgis have published a leaflet giving copper statistics. It details the supply on hand, consumption and prices in America and Europe for several years, besides April reports.

The directors of the El Favor Mining Company, whose property is located in the Hostotiapaquillo mining district in the state of Jalisco, Mexico, have ordered a dividend distribution of $35,000 on April 30, paying one cent per share on each share of outstanding stock.

Directors of the International Agricultural Corporation are expected to defer payment of the semi-annual dividend when they meet in the near future.

Commercial failures this week in the United States were 279, against 271 last week, 248 the preceding week and 242 the corresponding week last year, according to R. G. Dun & Co.

Newman Erb has gone to Michigan, Illinois and Nebraska to inspect his railway lines.

Comptroller Sohmer and Deputy Comptrollers Walsh and Kendall of the State of New York got little encouragement from Wall Street bankers when they visited that district to ascertain the advisability of offering at this time $30,000,000 State canal 4 per cent. bonds.

Comptroller Prendergast is preparing to sell upwards of $60,000,000 of corporate stock of the City of New York and about $10,000,000 of assessment bonds to run for ten years.

WORKMEN QUIT ON CHICAGO BUILDINGS

CHICAGO, April 12.—Workmen on two large down town buildings under construction refused to report for work today, and officials of the Building Trades Council said that work on many other big buildings would be suspended if an agreement is not reached between the employers and marble workers who are demanding an increase in pay. Rap Washburn for Pulling Teeth from Liquor Candy Law

(From Today's Boston Common.)

Representative Greenwood of Everett, who always has the courage of his convictions and does not hesitate to take up arms with a losing cause—which is one of several respects in which he is in a decided minority in the present Legislature—put up a spirited fight the other day in behalf of the bill prohibiting the sale of candy containing alcohol, a method of tricking children into the liquor habit which finds more secret helpers than open defenders.

The bill was killed by Washburn of Worcester by the transparent trick of inserting the nullifying word "knowingly" as an amendment. Mr. Washburn's legal conscience is evidently developed along conventional lines; however, the liquor trust is pretty strong in the Republican machine of Worcester County, and "Bob" probably knows what he is about.

Don't Forget—Tomorrow You Can Get Paul Revere Pennants

With the Sunday AMERICAN. All New England will want them. Better act promptly.

Sunday's AMERICAN.

Boston, April 9, 1913.

To the Stockholders of the United States Worsted Company:

The present UNITED STATES WORSTED COMPANY acquired on November 20, 1912, the property and assets of the UNITED STATES WORSTED COMPANY OF MAINE, the LAWRENCE DYE WORKS, and the SILESIA WORSTED MILLS, and since that date these properties have been operated by the present company.

At the same time this company acquired an option on the SAXONY MILLS, and since that time its operations have likewise been for the account of the present company.

The manufacturing plants known as the Uswoco Mills, the Silesia Mills, and the Saxony Mills are in every respect modern and up-to-date, and the physical condition of the plants which the Company acquired have fully come up to the expectations of the Company.

The spinning business of the Company has been satisfactory, and has shown good profits, and savings have been effected in the executive and accounting departments of the New York office and mills of the old United States Worsted Company to an amount approximately $114,000 per annum.

The properties of the United States Worsted Company of Maine were taken over by the present company upon the basis of a balance sheet prepared by chartered accountants, as of June 29, 1912.

From the results of an examination which is now being made for the Committee under the Plan of Reorganization, and which is not yet completed, it appears that the amount of the assets in the inventory of the United States Worsted Company, as of June 29, 1912, were largely overstated, and that the current liabilities of the Company, as of the same date, were understated. Reports of the United States Worsted Company (of Maine) showed that the Company had been making substantial earnings up to June 29, 1912. It now appears, however, from the examinations which have been made by the accountants that the assets of the United States Worsted Company (of Maine) have been still further reduced by large losses between July 1, 1912, and November 20, 1912, as well as by dividends paid on the preferred stock of the United States Worsted Company and Lawrence Dye Works during the same period, none of which appear to have been earned.

The examination already referred to further shows that the net quick assets of the Lawrence Dye Works were also substantially less than the amount shown in its balance sheet prior to its consolidation.

The assets of the Silesia Worsted Mills, Inc., were taken over upon the basis of the balance sheet of September 1, 1912. The assets acquired from that Company proved to exceed, by a substantial amount, the assets shown by the balance sheet in question.

For the reasons above stated, the net quick assets of the present company are much less than was contemplated by the Plan of Reorganization. In order to provide the Company with necessary working capital and maintain its high credit, arrangements have been made by the Bankers for supplying the sum of $1,000,000, of which $700,000 has already been temporarily loaned by them to the Company, and the indebtedness represented by such loan has been made subordinate to the indebtedness represented by all other notes of the Company, and to all indebtedness incurred for materials and supplies.

As soon as the accountants have finally completed their investigation, and so far as possible have placed the responsibility for the deficiency in the assets of the United States Worsted Company (of Maine) and the Lawrence Dye Works, some plan will be proposed for providing permanently such additional working capital as may be needed in addition to the quick assets actually acquired from the United States Worsted Company and the Lawrence Dye Works.

In view of the character of the manufacturing properties and the opportunities for business, as I now find them, I am of the opinion that, with a provision for adequate working capital, and with economies already effected in the management and operation of the old United States Worsted Company's affairs, the present company will eventually be in a position to earn reasonable dividends upon a proper capitalization.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

There Will Be No More Senators Elected, as Was Mr. Weeks, Against the Will of the People. Three-Fourths of the States Have Spoken

This week Connecticut has ratified the constitutional amendment submitted by Congress, taking away from the Legislatures of the several States the power to elect our United States Senators, and placing that power directly in the hands of the citizens themselves.

Connecticut is the thirty-fifth State to ratify this amendment. Thirty-five States are three-quarters of all the States of the Union. When three-fourths of the States ratify an amendment of the National Constitution proposed by Congress, the amendment is adopted and becomes a part of the Constitution itself.

Therefore, from this day forth, the Legislatures of the States will cease to elect United States Senators. Rich men will cease to pay the election expenses of candidates for the Legislature who are expected to repay them by their votes in favor of the rich man's candidacy for the Senate. The corporations and the special interests of the several States will cease to pool their power and to form legislative jackpots for the control of their United States Senators. The wise man in the gallery of the Senate will cease to point out to the unsophisticated visitor the different Senators, as they take their seats, in words like these: "The man just sitting down is Senator A. He represents the Beef Trust. The Senator in front is B., who represents the Pennsylvania Railroad. The Senator on the right represents the Steel Trust. The one coming up the middle aisle represents the New Haven Railroad, the United Shoe Machinery Company and their allied interests."

Perhaps the time is now at hand when that same wise man in the gallery may say to the stranger: "Senator A. represents the great State of Illinois, Senator B. represents the great State of Pennsylvania, Senator C. represents the great Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and all the people in them, rich and poor, strong and weak, in the true sense of the Saviour's deliverance, 'He that is chief is as he that doth serve.'"

This change has come to pass in less than three months from the day on which the Legislature of Massachusetts elected John W. Weeks to the Senate under the old method.

The election of Mr. Weeks illustrates how little our Legislatures, under the control of the special interests, even pretend to keep the spirit of a government by the people. In January last, when the election occurred, it was perfectly plain that in a few months the power to elect Senators would be forever taken away from the Legislatures.

The AMERICAN pointed out this fact and urged the Legislature to adopt the constitutional, feasible practice of the Western States, by which the people are called together, as at an election, to indicate their choice for Senator, the Legislature ratifying the choice by electing the man so chosen.

Every member of the present Legislature knew these facts. They knew also that the Republican majority in the Legislature was obtained only by a vicious system of gerrymandered districts, and that the Republican candidates had actually received far less votes than their opponents. They knew that the verdict of the country and of the State had been overwhelmingly against the policies which Mr. Weeks represented and which had ruined the Republican party. They knew that he would represent these policies for six long years after almost two-thirds of the people of Massachusetts had repudiated them.

Yet in the teeth of these facts within their knowledge the Republican members of the Legislature proceeded, some deliberately, and others under compulsion of the powerful private interests, to elect a man who has been looking backward while the people are looking forward.

It was a moral grand larceny from the people of Massachusetts of a representative in the United States Senate.

It was a great wrong. Every man who voted for Mr. Weeks under these circumstances knows that it was wrong. Yet, probably not one of them has a feeling of personal guilt, so lost are our legislators to a sense of personal obligation to carry out the will of the people. In the election of United States Senators, in matters affecting the powerful corporations and other special interests, our legislators have ceased to represent the people. They yield to the pressure, which is either venal or menacing.

It is not the fault of the individual legislators. They are as strong and as honest as conditions permit them to be. They are average men, and average men will not be true to the public under present conditions.

The remedy is not to be found in any attempt to improve the character of our representatives. We must take back to ourselves some of the power we have delegated to our Legislatures. We can do this by adopting the Initiative and Referendum, which will enable the people to take out of the hands of the Legislature any vital matter with which it is paltering, and decide that matter for themselves. The Initiative and the Referendum will also remove from our representatives the pressure and temptations from the unscrupulous special interests whose agents beset our public men on all sides.

Then, and not till then, shall we have honest and loyal public men and a real representative government.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

OBTUSE EMPLOYERS

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Referring to your editorial, "Do You Underestimate Your Powers?" would like to say that while there are hundreds in Boston that do not underestimate their powers, they are powerless to make positive decision.

While Napoleon had the power to do so these people in Boston have to look up to the fellow higher up, and as this fellow higher up is a little scared of losing his job, the little fellow with the initiative is usually held down to a small position. I know both from my own experiences in Boston and from observation of others.

As an illustration, the writer recently suggested a plan of getting new business for a certain corporation. The lack of knowledge of the conditions in the territories that I suggested made the proposition appear skeptical, however. I am sure that the writer, had he been able to carry the plan out as he understood it, the venture would have proven a success.

There are many such instances in this city, where the lack of foresight on the part of the superior is holding many a man in a smaller capacity, and, naturally, leading the man to believe that he is unfit for any better job. B. G.

Uncle Trusty!

"Johnny, if Woodrow is going to continue making personal visits to Congress it will put a crimp in your correspondence school! I've got up a moving picture about it! On the left you see Woodrow dropping in unexpectedly at the Senate lounging room! Observe the expressions of glad surprise and welcome on the faces of the Senators! They have just been getting some letters from you, enclosing checks! If this thing keeps on they may have to stop working for corporations and depend on their salaries! Or you may have to leave their checks in a hollow tree for them! Elihu, step down to the corner and get me a mild cigar.

Won't Somebody Give Boston an Observatory?

People Eager to See Wonders of Skies, but Have No Chance.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

AMONG my letters from unknown correspondents there are none which cause me so much regret, or make me feel so helpless, as those—and there are many—in which the writer asks: "Where can I go to get a look at the heavens through a powerful telescope?"

When a man or woman is in the mental mood that leads to such a desire it is a sign of intellectual awakening which should not go unheeded. The means of gratifying so commendable an ambition ought to be immediately at hand.

But no such place exists. A People's Observatory does not exist, and the fact that it does not is an indictment against this age of advancing science.

It might cost a few hundred thousand dollars to equip a big city with an observatory of that kind, but could money be better expended? It is a side of popular education that is completely neglected, and yet it is the side which opens out the widest mental views, and gives the most powerful impulse to the purely intellectual instincts of humanity.

To look for one's self at the fantastic landscapes of the moon, and see that strange little companion planet of the earth covered with gigantic mountains and huge crater-pits, and revealing, all over its surface, the story of the birth, growth and death of a world; to see Venus when she rolls through the evening sky, growing brighter and larger as she swings nearer the earth, and passing through the same phases as the moon while the sunlight creeps over her surface; to watch the vast cloud-belts of the giant Jupiter going along with varying speeds according to their distance from his equator, and exhibiting ever changing forms and colors.

To behold Saturn with his marvelous rings, 170,000 miles in diameter, suspended freely in space around him; to study the polar snows and the mysterious markings on the face of the earth-like planet Mars; to see the great ring of the Milky Way resolved into clouds upon clouds of stars, piled up, in places, like the dazzling cumuli of a summer sky; to study the double stars, the triple stars, the multiple stars, the colored stars, the stars that flock innumerable in vast globular clusters, apparently as thickly packed as swarms of hive-hunting bees pressing around their queen.

To behold the nebulae, those immense swirls of chaotic gases and vapors that are the cloudy cradles of suns and worlds yet unborn—all this is an education of incalculable value which is practically refused to thousands thirsting to receive it, simply because in the march of civilization we have forgotten, or neglected, to provide the means.

Would not a People's Observatory be as glorious a monument of modern progress as a great library, a zoological or botanical garden, a museum of mineralogy or geology, of natural history or art? Might it not do as much as any of these for the broadening and uplifting of the human mind?

Books cannot tell and photographs and pictures cannot reveal the full wonder of the universe around us. No man can see the sky for any other man. Each must use his own eyes, and receive the impressions of those majestic phenomenon upon his own brain cells in order that their full effect may be felt.

Astronomy, the grandest of all the sciences, because the most independent of narrow terrestrial uses and requirements, is the most neglected of all from the popular point of view. To cultivate astronomy, to fill the mind with the thoughts and images which the universe suggests and presents, is one of the highest and noblest forms of worship that the human soul can offer to its Creator.

If Boston possessed a great People's Observatory, entirely devoted to the popular needs and longings for a closer acquaintance with the mighty universe, it would become a cynosure for the whole civilized world. It would be as famous in these modern days as was the Parthenon of Athens in the time of Pericles, for it would be an outward expression of the spirit of this age, which looks forward and upward, and feels that the little earth cannot satisfy the aspiring nature of intellectual creatures who are assured that they have been made in the image of Him who brought all these things alike into existence.

If I were a multi-millionaire, I feel certain that I should devote at least one of my millions to the establishment of so novel and so magnificent an institution. But, as I have no millions, I appeal to those who have them to give serious attention to this subject, and to immortalize their names and do a vast service to humanity by founding the first People's Observatory.

SOME SPRING SHADES

By N. P. BABCOCK

THE answer quite has gone amiss,
I really wish I knew,
Why, on a cheerful day like this,
The sky should be so "blue."

The sun has dried its weeping face;
Harsh winds no more abuse;
It surely seems most out of place,
This present fit of blues.

The only explanation I
Can possibly conceive
Is that the Spirit of the sky
Finds earthly cause to grieve.

Perchance it loathes the Jealousy
That, in the Spring, is seen
To turn each blade and shrub and tree
Into a "livid green."

You see the point? I hope 'tis plain,
For, by chromatics led,
This "Yellow pome on Spring" might gain
A chance of being red.

The Telephone Girls' 'Lark'--As Seen by a Mother

She Wonders if the Telephone Company Officials Who Brought Them Here and Quartered Them in Hotels Like Palaces Counted the Cost—to the Girls

By a Boston Mother

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

They came from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, these young girls whom the telephone company brought to Boston to break the expected strike of other young girls—Boston girls—employed in the Boston telephone exchanges as operators.

We read about them in the newspapers.

Let us imagine the situation of one girl out of the five hundred or more who were thus brought to Boston to be used as instruments of industrial warfare against their sisters.

Her name is Hilda, let us say. Her home is in Philadelphia, in a quiet street. She lives with her widowed mother, her sister, Nellie, a bookkeeper in a publishing house, and her brother, Rob, a special delivery messenger at the postoffice. An average American family, in an average American home. Mother does the housework. The rent of the house is $30 a month. Mother is the best of mothers. Everybody keeps good hours. There is no garage, because there is no motor.

And the telephone company whisked her off to Boston. She was going to have twelve dollars a week, while, and if she worked—the maximum salary which was named by the Boston girls as one of their requests to the company—she would receive $25 "bonus"—almost the price of a nobby suit for Summer—and she would see the town. Some of the girls said they came "for a lark."

Where was she during her stay in Boston?

Living in one of the most palatial hotels in the United States; sharing with another girl a room that costs six dollars a day without board; or, with two other girls, an eight-dollar or a ten-dollar room. "Nothing is too good!" "Give them the best in the house!"

She waited, in idleness, for the Boston girls to get their final answer. She had the run of a fashionable hotel. She saw there women of the world of fashion, gloriously arrayed, although, the telephone girl from abroad may have reasoned, they neither toil nor spin.

We are told that fourteen matrons and ten private detectives came to town with one party of 358 of these girls. They came on a special train of eight cars. There were two dining cars.

I should like to know if the officials of the Bell telephone system counted the cost.

I do not mean the cost in dollars and cents. The New England Telegraph & Telephone Company, one of the parts of the Bell system, has a surplus of approximately $4,000,000.

The stockholders of the telephone company undoubtedly gave some thought to the money cost of this disturbance. Some of them, I have no doubt, modestly sipped their tea and ate their toast of an evening while these girls "on a lark" had the "best in the house."

What will be the cost to these girl strike-breakers, and to other girls, and to the country, of this Boston "lark"? Did the directors of the telephone company consider Hilda and her sisters, and the folks back home?

Will Hilda—after her stay at the Copley-Plaza—be content with the modest little house in a Philadelphia side street? Will the home fare satisfy hereafter? Will Hida want another lark? Will she long to see another town?

I suppose the excellent citizens who sat at all the directors' tables in the great Bell system thought well upon these things before they brought these girls to Boston. I hope they did. I hope they counted the cost. I trust that money will pay it. But I fear.

I trust that no young girl and no honest home may suffer through the "lark" which brought young women to Boston, and its best hotels, from New York, and Jersey City, and Philadelphia, and Baltimore, but—with every consideration for the men on the firing line for the telephone company—I am thankful and glad that the responsibility for the "lark" is not mine.

Some may see in the telephone situation another argument for giving woman the ballot. If these girls were voters, it is almost certain that long before this their champion would have been discovered in the Massachusetts Legislature.

And let us all hope that Miss Hilda and all her young companions are now safe at home, and that the United States may never see again anything like the "lark" that brought them to Boston.

A BOSTON MOTHER.

GIRLS OF YESTERDAY

By GEORGE B. MOREWOOD

It appears a poor plan to disparage
The girls of our grandmother's day.
They were fairly well suited for marriage,
Though prepared "to love and obey."
Our grandfathers thought they were charming,
And Cupid still hovered above;
Their manners did not seem alarming
To the bare little blind God of Love.

What if they had "indolent fingers,"
Or "fainted at sight of a mouse"?
Somehow a tradition yet lingers
That they well understood "keeping house."
Then their lives were devoted to others;
They were gentle to those in distress;
And, moreover, they brought up our mothers,
Making thus of their lives a success.

But yet I would not appear spiteful
In regard to the girl of today;
For she too is, of course, quite delightful,
Although in a different way.
And skilfully Cupid arranges
To adjust his attacks now and then,
When, in order to meet women's changes,
He alters the taste of us men.
